CIRCULATING

The residence of John Bartel, Esq., Richmond, Ind., modeled on the lines of Caruso's Italian Villa. Architect: H. H. Hiestand, Esq., Eaton, Ohio.

This residence is constructed of Bishopric Stucco over Bishopric Base on all exteriors.

THE DRUM

Bishopric Stucco is shipped in hermetically sealed metal drums. There is no waste or deterioration in storage and you are assured of absolutely fresh new material. The Roll and the Drum meet with the endorsement of architects, builders and satisfied home-owners throughout the world.

THE ROLL

Bishopric Inter-Locking Base, the insulating reinforcement for every stucco or plaster wall, is shipped in large rolls containing 100 square feet each. The bar-lock of Bishopric Base effectually locks the stucco. Bishopric Base provides both insulation and reinforcement and increases the strength of the building.

The Home of Your Dreams

Be It Ever So Humble, There Is No Place Like Home

For a long time you have been planning that dream home for you and yours. You have considered the outside appearance—the style of architecture—the inside scheme of decoration. But have you given thought to the construction of the inner and outer walls? Upon this construction depends your ultimate happiness and living comfort.

Your home must have the qualities of strength and durability. It must have style—you are to live in it for a period of years; you will see it every day—and every day your neighbors and passersby will see it.

Quality you must have for the comfort, safety and welfare of yourself and family; ability to satisfy your own and their desires.

The outside appearance of your house indicates the manner of the man within. It indicates, as it were, his standing in the community. And surely an attractive and permanent exterior means an added asset in rent or sale value when occasion necessitates.

Don't Just Wish For A Pretty Home—Have One

Your home in Bishopric Stucco over Bishopric Base will cost not a penny more than a frame house. Yet this is not all; not by any means.

Save $1000.00

Painting bills for the average frame house amount to more than $1000 in a 10-year period. This is just that much money in the Bank for you when you build with Bishopric—for Bishopric is just another word for "no painting."

Bishopric Stucco means permanency—a beautiful house; warm in winter, cool in summer; minimum fuel bills; resistance against fire, vermin and decay; insulation against change of temperature and dampness.

Bishopric Stucco you may have in scores of artistic finishes; in any shade you desire.

The first cost is low; the upkeep far less than for any frame construction.

It means something to you when thousands of users are enthusiastic about Bishopric.

See How
It Locks the STUCCO

Bishopric Inter-Locking Base is first nailed securely to the framework of the building. When Bishopric Stucco is mixed with water it becomes plastic. It is then referred to as mortar.

This mortar by means of a trowel is laid on over Bishopric Base, going over and in between the wood strips and locking into an inverted wedge clasp which holds forever.

Note how the wood strips of Bishopric Base are imbedded in a tough layer of asphalt mastic on a wood-fibre background which shuts out moisture, heat, cold and vermin.

WHEN CHRISTMAS CHECKS ARE FLUTTERING

JUDITH bade her chauffeur wait and joined Charlotte and Lea at the steps of Helen's house.

"I am so eager to hear what Helen does with Tom's Christmas check," she said. "Lea thinks she'll buy those early American candlesticks, but I'm betting on the coffee service."

"Wrong—both of you," announced Charlotte. "She's already spent it—on clothes."

"Clothes!" Judith echoed in amazement.

"Why, she cares scarcely anything for them."

"I know it but Tom did so want her well dressed that he insisted she get a real fashion expert to shop with her and choose the very smartest of everything. You'd never know her—especially her feet. Why, they look too adorable."

"Made to order shoes?" queried Judith.

"No—this fashion guide told her that everyone who used to wear custom shoes now wears Ped-e-modes. Honestly, they're the stunningest shoes I've seen in ages."

"What kind did she get?"

"Oh—swagger looking brogues, some striking dull kid with black suede trimming, patent leather opera pumps, a short tongue Colonial, a button tie and—oh, four different pairs of evening slippers."

"Tell her I simply must see them!"

The center strap accents the instep's grace. The shoes, while low, afford real support. Newest shades and materials.

At last a suite of distinctive beauty and superlative utility to add to the color-glory of the sun-parlor or relieve the drabness and the dullness of the modern living room. Not in its cheerful color and beautiful lines alone—but in its new application of comfort is the Troy Flote-Divan Suite an exceptional idea in home furnishing.

For the Flote-Divan is a davenport with motion. One rests in it and glides back and forth with a gentle motion far more luxurious than that of a rocking chair. Concealed at its base is a sector of curved track, on which it floats back and forth, smoothly and quietly, on silent wheels mounted on floating ball bearings.

Matching it are two stationary overstuffed chairs—a trio of beautiful pieces for your sun-parlor or living room with a comfort quality hitherto unknown in indoor furniture. Choice of many handsome coverings in a variety of colorings, some for indoor and others for porch purposes.

 The NATION'S BUILDING STONE

Interesting Facts About
 INDIANA LIMESTONE

Number Eleven

The Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's Association is composed of 20 of the largest producers of Indiana Limestone affiliated for the purposes of promotional and research work, and service to architects and patrons. An Advertising Department seeks to spread the news of Indiana Limestone, its uses and qualities; a Technical Department attends to Building Code matters and research work; a Service Department gives direct aid and advice to architects, builders, and contractors in their construction problems. Several hundred thousand dollars are spent annually to give this thorough co-operation to all who are interested in the use of Indiana Limestone.

INDIANA LIMESTONE is used today more than any other natural stone in building the homes of the nation securely. Such homes endure through all generations and are beautiful as all things natural are beautiful, containing no hint in color or texture of that which is artificial or imitative. They have a soundness of structure that no other building material can give.

Transportation facilities make it possible to obtain Indiana Limestone easily and quickly in all parts of the country, and modern production methods have made it the lowest in cost of all building stones.

Will you find the way to your Spanish Garden?

REAM STUCCO. Scarlet hibiscus. Black iron grilles. High above, the whispering fronds of a coconut palm. A great red jar in a corner. A table set for luncheon on a cool, tiled floor. A brilliant splotch of sun on the wall. Your Spanish garden? Why not? . . . You can have a home in Coral Gables in the picturesque manner of old Seville, decorated in perfect taste, with a garden that takes you back to the days of Spanish domain. It will cost you no more than an ordinary home on a dingy city street—and its value must increase as the city plan matures.

CORAL GABLES is being built according to a plan designed by famous architects, not by politicians. Every home, club, hotel or business building must conform in architecture and planting to this plan that carries on the Spanish traditions of this old Spanish colony. While the city plan progresses, while the University of Miami is building, while the private schools, country clubs and businesses are breaking ground for their new buildings—property values advance. And so many substantial projects are under way that such an advance should reasonably continue for many years.

Will You Share in This Prosperity?

Home-builders from every state in the Union are erecting hundreds of houses that stabilize present values, and form a solid base for even greater affluence. You may buy but a single plot, or you may build an estate adjoining the new Miami-Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables. But you cannot escape your share in the general prosperity that must attend the steady growth of Miami and its environs. Thousands of people have attained financial independence. It is your turn now. For the tide of prosperity has only begun to rise.

The Coupon Brings You Rex Beach's Dramatic Story—Free

REX BEACH has written a book about the miracle of Coral Gables. Send for it. Better still, come and see for yourself. Let us tell you about the special trains and steamships that we run at frequent intervals to Coral Gables. If you should take one of these trips, and should buy property at Coral Gables, the cost of your transportation will be refunded upon your return. Sign and mail the coupon—Now!

Your Opportunity

Coral Gables property has been steadily rising in value. Some of it has shown a 100 per cent increase every year. Roger Babson says that Florida offers the greatest opportunity for money-making of all the states. Yet building plots in Coral Gables may now be secured by a small initial investment. These plots are offered in a wide range of prices, which include all modern improvements such as streets, street lighting, electricity and water. Twenty-five per cent is required in cash, the balance will be distributed in convenient payments over a period of three years.

The Facts About Coral Gables

Coral Gables is a city, adjoining the city of Miami itself. It is incorporated, with a commission form of government. It is highly restricted. It occupies about 10,000 acres of high, well-drained land. It is four years old. It has 100 miles of wide paved streets and boulevards. It has seven hotels completed or under construction. It has 45 miles of white-way lighting and 50 miles of intersectional street lighting. It has 6½ miles of beach frontage. Two golf courses are now completed, two more are building. Two country clubs are now in actual use. More than one thousand homes have already been erected, another thousand now under construction. Thirty million dollars have been expended in development work. Additional plans call for at least twice that amount. Seventy-five million dollars worth of property has already been bought in Coral Gables.

Mr. John McEntee Bowman is now building the ten-million-dollar hotel, country club and bathing casino in Coral Gables to be known as the Miami-Biltmore Group. The Miami-Biltmore Hotel will be ready about January 1, 1926. Coral Gables will also contain these buildings and improvements, all of which will be completed within a few years:

The $15,000,000 University of Miami, the $500,000 Mahi Temple of the Mystic Shrine, a $1,000,000 University High School, a $150,000 Railway Station, a Military Academy and Stadium, a Theatre, the College for Young Women of the Sisters of Saint Joseph, a magnificent Conservatory of Music, and other remarkable projects.

Radio needn't disturb any room

Here is a Radio set which simply melts into the decorations of any room.

This Atwater Kent Model 20 Compact is as small as a row of a dozen books, as unobtrusive as a well trained servant, as neat and workmanlike as every fine electrical instrument should be.

Yet nothing in effectiveness has been sacrificed in designing this set. The parts in the Model 20 Compact are identical with the parts in the regular Atwater Kent Model 20, rearranged to save space.

Perhaps you still think of Radio as a tangle of wires and untidy parts—to be relegated to the cellar or the attic. But now Radio, thanks to this set, has moved into the rooms where the family lives. It fits naturally into its surroundings. It has actually become decorative as well as entertaining!

THE car you've been putting off so long . . . they're talking about it, perhaps in hushed tones when you're not around . . . it's what they want this Christmas, more than anything else in the world. They may not tell you—but they're hoping you'll buy it. In a mysterious jewel box—for the very top of the Christmas tree—are the keys to that car.

The car, of course, is the Studebaker Big Six Sedan; a car that will bring days—yes, years of joy to the entire family.

Due to Studebaker's world-noted One-Profit—Unit-Built construction and "No-Yearly-Models" policies the Big Six offers three distinct advantages . . . price, quality and protected investment . . . true of no comparable car on the market. It is outselling every other car in the world of equal or greater horsepower, according to the rating of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The Sedan here illustrated is richly upholstered in genuine mohair. Its cushions deep-seated and luxurious. Hardware is of butler silver finish.

Seven ride comfortably in its spacious body. And every detail in its lavish equipment bespeaks the very ultimate in quality. There's an automatic spark control, safety lighting switch on the steering wheel, gasoline gauge on the dash. There's also an 8-day clock, automatic windshield cleaner, cowl ventilator, stop light, inspection light on 10-foot cord and a splendid coincidental lock to ignition and steering wheel operated by the key that locks the door and the spare tire. Nothing is forgotten—nothing left to be desired.

Steering is effortless. Parking and driving a delight to women. A car of wonderful riding quality and tremendous service, yet its price is but one-quarter to one-half that of its seven American rivals which equal it in power.

Give Your Family
this Supreme Gift

Any Studebaker dealer will arrange delivery for Christmas morning, Christmas Eve or any time you designate. And arrange the terms of payment under Studebaker's Budget Plan of Purchase to fit your individual requirements

EXCLUSIVE

Everyone knows the lasting qualities of Armco—pure Ingot Iron. No material can equal it for lath. This company has the exclusive right to produce metal lath made of this time defying iron.

Walls that are permanently free from Cracks and Marks

HOME builders, today, know that it's safe to apply the very finest wall decoration as soon as the plaster dries. Metal lath—especially Herringbone Metal Lath—has made this possible. It has relieved home owners of the haunting fear that soon—perhaps in a few months—the plaster will crack—lath marks will appear—ugly stains will disfigure the beauty of their walls.

The fine steel mesh of Herringbone reinforces every square inch of the plastered surface, holds it in a rigid, unyielding grip that never gives way. The lath literally becomes embedded in the plaster, and the plaster takes a clinch that can't be shaken loose. Herringbone walls and ceilings are crack-proof and fire-resisting.

Yet, with all its advantages, Herringbone construction is surprisingly economical. First cost is but slightly more than that of old-fashioned wooden lath. The saving in erection cost and the elimination of repair bills, much more than makes up the difference. And Herringbone is good for a lifetime—it's the only lath made of the famous Armco Ingot Iron.

Before you build be sure to read "Building For Permanence and Beauty"—an interesting book that gives many valuable construction hints. It's free. Write for it today.

Before Home Ties Weaken

WHEN home ties weaken under the tugging influence of outside interests—look to your furniture!

The insidious changes of time and style may have taken their toll of its beauty, lessened its powers to combat outside attractions, and weakened the home-interest of family and friends.

Win back this fading love of home. Bind home ties closer with better home furnishings. There's new pleasure, new adventure in home-rejuvenation, and sensibly done over a period of time, the cost is really un-felt. Make the start, as so many have done, with tables. It is surprising what a delightful change can be wrought with the addition of well chosen tables.

For beauty of design and finish, enduring style and sound construction, make your selections from tables bearing the Kiel trade mark. Conforming in design to the accepted standards of the best periods, and fashioned in selected woods by master craftsmen, Kiel Tables are worthy of your confidence and of a place in your home.

With all these charms they are moderate in price. Inspect them at your local furniture merchant's.

BATHROOMS with plain white tiled walls can be made interesting and colorful with shower bath curtains made of cretonne, silk moire or serviceable gingham heavily rubberized. For the room with figured walls come shower curtains of thin silk in a charming array of colors. This material is thoroughly waterproof.

CONSIDERABLE attention is being given to the bathroom these days. No longer is it an interior of cheerless white walls unrelieved by a bit of heartening color. Decorators as well as architects are embracing the opportunity provided by brilliant tiles, patterned wall coverings and colorful rubberized materials of all kinds. Wall paper is being used to a great extent but is not as practical as a wall covering made of cloth and treated to resemble wall paper. Plain effects are available in this fabric as well as all-over designs. As this material can be washed it makes a serviceable and decorative wall covering for a bathroom.

HOOKED rugs, on account of the wide interest in early American decoration are having a vigorous revival. These gay floor coverings with their quaint designs and soft, faded colors have the naïve quality and sturdy appearance characteristic of so much of the early pine and maple furniture.

ONE is often puzzled as to a satisfactory decoration for the center of the table at Christmas time. While flowers are always charming, this time of year calls for something a little more in keeping with the festivity of the season. To meet this demand a well-known florist in New York City has designed a centerpiece of Christmas greens interspersed with colorful berries and holding two or four red candles according to the size. If preferred, this arrangement of greens can be made to fit a window box or mantel shelf.

THIS same firm has another attractive Christmas gift idea that is sure to appeal to all lovers of flowers. They arrange, through their various branches, to send a beautiful rose, timed to arrive on Christmas day, with a card announcing that six or a dozen ever-blooming hybrid tea roses will be sent in the following Spring. This gift with its suggestion of a summer garden makes a welcome and charming remembrance.

ANOTHER gift that carries with it the suggestion of colorful blossoms is a new and excellent device for arranging flowers in a vase or bowl. It consists of an aluminum holder fitted with flexible prongs, long enough to hold the flowers in any desired position without injuring the stem. These holders range in size from one and a quarter inches to eight inches in diameter. They are inconspicuous and an improvement over the glass holder with its holes frequently not deep enough to hold a long stemmed flower. A holder of this type and a colored pottery bowl are welcome additions to any room in the house.

SO insistent is the demand for floor coverings to harmonize with the scheme of the room that rugs are now being woven in the East with backgrounds in the most wanted colors. The objection to Oriental rugs in the past has been the prevalence of the blue and red tones. Now one can have the advantage of the lovely old designs plus the new soft backgrounds. Chinese rugs are also popular just now for living rooms and dining rooms—their soft coloring harmonizing with many schemes of decoration. This type of rug is particularly good in an 18th Century English interior—a room with paneled walls painted some neutral color and furniture after designs by Chippendale and Sheraton. Rooms of this type are apt to be cold looking on account of the pale colors used and the absence of design on the walls. For this reason a Chinese rug with a background in blue, amber or taupe, and a graceful, scattered pattern is particularly appropriate as it brings the interest of design and is not too strong in coloring to interfere with the scheme of the room. In size the majority of the new rugs are larger than ever before, the floor margin being from six to twelve inches. Many rooms are being carpeted all over.

OWING to the present interest in design, Oriental rugs are coming to the fore again. In certain types of rooms—early English interiors, for instance, or dignified Spanish or Italian living rooms and dining rooms—nothing quite takes the place of a fine Oriental. This kind of rug is also good in halls—an interior that frequently does not allow for an elaborate scheme of decoration and therefore depends on a striking and colorful floor covering.

THE shops devoted to interior decoration are specializing these days in small accessories suitable for Christmas gifts. Among these is some unusually interesting modernist pottery made in Vienna. Candlesticks, ash trays, ink wells and match holders in amusing animal and fish designs have the vivid colors and daring patterns characteristic of futuristic art. These accessories are gay, pleasing notes in a sombre interior and are to be recommended for their original shapes and colorful, unique designs.

THE growing interest in color is reflected in the demand for colorful floor coverings. While such neutral shades as taupe, gray and the sand tones will always be used in rooms where the walls and upholstery are prominent in design and color, a large majority of women are now demanding plain rugs in such colors as amber, powder blue and dark blue, rose, mulberry, amethyst, egg plant, raisin, golden brown, a soft burnt orange, blue-green and a new yellow green, rather on the pistache tone. Seamless velvet, chenille and Wilton carpeting is used for this type of rug. Narrow width carpeting is also used but is not as effective, naturally, as a seamless rug.

MODERN Viennese brass also makes attractive gifts as it has the merit of interesting design. In this connection are candlesticks, combination match and cigarette holders, and cigarette stampers in amusing animal designs—all suitable accessories for a man's desk.

FOR SALE

a heat-leaking house anywhere you want it

Everywhere there are beautiful houses which are easy to buy. Their owners are anxious to sell . . . even at a loss. They want to build modern insulated homes.

People who think for themselves, no longer put up with half-comfortable houses . . . cold-in-winter, hot-in-summer . . . wasteful of fuel.

They do not have to! Four years ago, Celotex Insulating Lumber made it practical to build homes that would really keep out heat and cold.

This was one of the greatest improvements ever made in home building. For Celotex is the material which combines high insulating value with greater structural strength and does not add to the cost of building.

And everywhere, intelligent, far-seeing people have been quick to accept Celotex and enjoy its advantages.

Homes that are not for sale

More than sixty thousand leaders have built Celotex homes that are not for sale. Today they are enjoying a degree of luxurious home comfort . . . and real economy . . . that no ordinary house could possibly give.

These Celotex homes keep snug and

Comfort with fuel-saving at no extra building cost

Celotex is Lumber—the only Insulating Lumber. It is the one material that combines higher insulating value with greater structural strength, and is not an extra item in the building.

A home built with it costs no more than an ordinary house; because Celotex replaces five other building materials.

1 It replaces wood lumber as sheathing, giving greater structural strength.

2 Plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex, forming a stronger wall than lath and plaster.

3 Celotex replaces building paper, giving better protection against wind and moisture.

4 It replaces deadening felt, giving a restful quiet.

5 Wherever used, Celotex replaces any extra insulation or heat-stopping material.

A smaller, less expensive furnace, fewer radiators, will be required to heat a Celotex house. Year after year, your fuel bills will be cut by one-third.

warm on the bitterest winter days . . . refreshingly cool on wilting summer weather.

In them, the children's health is guarded from colds by giving draughts and sudden temperature changes. Their owners have more money to spend on the luxuries they want . . . for Celotex homes cost one-third less to heat than ordinary homes. The not-for-sale homes are sounder investments—worth more money.

Get all the facts

These are living improvements so valuable that they make the ordinary house as modern as one without electricity, modern plumbing or a central heating plant.

Get the facts. Ask your architect, contractor or lumber dealer to tell you more about Celotex. All lumber dealers can supply it. Everywhere leaders in the building lines advise its use.

If you are going to buy a home already built, get Celotex construction if you possibly can.

And by all means send for the Celotex Building Book. Just use coupon below.

A. Clapboards, brick or stucco.

B. Celotex Insulating Lumber.

C. Studding, or framework.

D. Celotex Insulating Lumber.

E. Plaster.

Application of Celotex Insulating Lumber: (B) in outside walls as sheathing. And (D) on inside walls under plaster.

Note this actual test. A Celotex box is divided in half by a layer of Celotex. The right half is heated by an electric lamp.

After one hour the left half is 102° cooler.

In the roof and walls of a house, Celotex keeps heat IN during the winter, OUT in summer.

HOW ONE WOMAN FOUND BEAUTY FOR FLOORS THAT WERE OLD

THE woman who lives here loves her floor. It was all her own idea. When she first moved to this house, the wood floor in the living-room was worn, scarred, shabby. It made the whole room look old.

Then one day a thought struck her, "Wonder what I can do with a brown linoleum floor." So she went to the head of the linoleum department in a store in town.

This merchant was full of helpful suggestions. "Instead of plain linoleum, I am going to suggest Armstrong's Brown Jaspé Linoleum. First, let me show you a sample, and then let me show how lovely it will look when combined with bright draperies, and especially with a fine fabric rug."

Prettier than she hoped

She and two of them tried various draperies beside the sample, until they settled on the curtains you see here. Then the merchant showed a few small rugs for a section of Jaspé linoleum. That decided her. The effect made her think how different her own pretty rugs would look on such a floor.

Before she snapped out the lights the next night, her new floor was a reality. It had taken but a day to cement the linoleum permanently in place over builders' deadening felt.

When her friends saw her new floor they were delighted. Even her husband remarked, "Well, that's sensibly beautiful!" Was this woman happy? Was she the least bit vain in her triumph?

Passing months brought other reasons for her feeling toward this floor. It made so little trouble. A daily dusting with a dry mop removed all surface dirt. Occasionally she renewed the soft polish to the walked-on places with a cloth moistened with liquid wax. That was all. She forgot that a floor ever had to be scrubbed. And always her new floor is so silent, so restful underfoot, so mellow in its kindly glow under the evening lamp!

Do you know the new designs in Armstrong's Linoleum? Do you know the place it is making for itself in interior decoration? Will you send 25 cents for a book on this subject?

Agnes Foster Wright's new book on furnishing and decorating homes

Mrs. Wright was formerly President of the Interior Decorators' League of New York, and is a contributor to House and Garden and other magazines.

Her new book includes color ideas for decorating different rooms, and presents some simple and interesting principles regarding the use of color in home interiors. Just what you have been wanting for furniture and draperies

WE have brought the fast colors, unusual designs and fine textures hitherto found only in high-priced fabrics into a line of beautiful draperies and upholsteries at reasonable prices. Not only is the range of fabrics remarkable, but we have brought out designs of various periods and motifs. Exclusive decorators are accepting them with enthusiasm. You, too, will see what possibilities they offer you.

Amory Browne Fabrics are backed by our absolute guarantee against fading. If any should fade, from any cause, we will refund not only the full cost of the fabric itself, but also the cost of labor and trimmings. This fully protects every one who uses Amory Browne Fabrics.

And yet this splendid line is sold at remarkably popular prices. You will find no other fabrics of similar quality and design that can compare with them in price.

Wauregan Chintz—Either conventionalized or naturalistic flower effects printed in fadeless colors on splendid quality chintz, to our knowledge the highest quality chintz on the market.

A Gift Box of Crane's Cordlinear

Christmas gifts may be bought at any price—but

In its own class, each gift should be the very finest that money can buy. The best in motor cars, pearl necklaces, or sable coats costs thousands of dollars. But in writing paper, the very finest obtainable can be bought for as little as five dollars.

There is no gift more acceptable than this new holiday box of Crane's Cordlinear. It is at once a perfect expression of Christmas thought and a delicate compliment to the good taste of the recipient.

An impersonal gift, yet an intimate one.

The box includes a generous supply of letter sheets and cards, that may be monogrammed as an added touch, with envelopes of modish design.

The paper is Cordlinear, a new Crane creation, with smart "cord" effect, broken by self-tone vertical lines. The gift beautiful, artistically boxed and obtainable wherever good stationery is sold.

The Tiled Bath— A Profitable Investment

Not more than two or three things fix the real estate rating, and the selling and home value of a house according to the experience of seasoned builders.

The feature which brings the greatest preference and sells a house in the greatest number of instances is the tiling of the bathroom. The tiled bath is one of the essentials which makes a house desirable.

Tile the bathroom of an old-fashioned house—and enough desirability is added thereby to raise the selling value far in excess of the cost of the tilework.

If the tiled bath is so desirable to others, it is equally desirable for you.

Make this investment, and let the profits accrue while you enjoy the advantages of a genuine tiled bath—ultimately without cost to you.

The ZONE of KELVINATION

Kelvinator, the pioneer system of electric refrigeration, makes ordinary electric current and causes it to chill the refrigerator. It operates automatically, requires no attention, and eliminates the use of ice.

The Zone of Kelvination is a zone of temperature that lies below 50°, which Kelvinator maintains all the time. This is much colder and more constant than the temperature ice maintains. It is a zone of dry, frosty cold much superior to any refrigeration you have ever known.

FITS ANY REFRIGERATOR

Kelvinator can be installed in any good refrigerator. It requires but a short time to make the installation and the necessary electric connection, and from that time on you simply forget it. Your refrigerator actually keeps itself cold.

THE KELVIN-ET
$250 f. o. b. Detroit

The Kelvin-et is a compact refrigerating unit for small homes and apartments, priced at $250 f. o. b. Detroit. It is Kelvinator and refrigerator, all in one. It is delivered to your home like an ordinary refrigerator, and requires only an electric connection.

KELVINATOR

are made in sizes for every retail business. The Kelvinator air-cooled principle makes installation simple and economical.

The Perfect Gift

—for the woman who loves her home

This year thousands of men who want to be generous without being extravagant will give Kelvinator—the unusual gift. Thousands will find in Kelvinator the ideal gift that carries with it happiness and Christmas Spirit, yet the promise of a life-time of convenience and usefulness as well.

Kelvinator is not a work-a-day gift. It is a source of pride and happiness to the woman who loves fine things in her home. Yet it is the greatest saver of time and steps the home can have.

Make this Christmas different—one that never will be forgotten. Give to your wife the convenience of electric refrigeration—the perfect preservation of foods—the freezing of dainty desserts without labor—freedom from the annoyance of daily ice delivery. Give her Kelvinator, the unusual gift.

See your local dealer early about the proper model for your refrigerator. Literature on request.

Things People Buy Abroad

THE tiles that say "Persia"; the hand-painted handkerchiefs or beaded bags that say "Paris"; the linen that says "Italy" or "Ireland" . . .

Often, by a wise use of the Shoppers' and Buyers' Guide, you can find, some three thousand miles and dollars nearer home, the selfsame thing that your friends extract—at a price—from a bargain-wise European.

It's fun, of course, to say "And here we have a trifle of lawn and lace I picked up in the tiniest, dirtiest shop imaginable, on the Ponte Vecchio." Or, "I found this tile—just slightly chipped—in a bazaar in Algiers."

But, on the other hand, it's quite as nice to admire the tile, or the trifle of lace, and be warmly, snugly—even smugly—conscious that you have a whole set of very similar, suspiciously similar, tiles; and a luncheon set of the lawn-and-lace that you purchased in a quite spotless shop you read about in House & Garden. No duty to pay . . . no desperate smuggling amongst the baby's shoes!

Yes, it's quite worth while to look for suggestions in every issue.

many people the country over are thinking of dogs in connection with Christmas lists.

One's mode of living, the extensiveness of one's domain —whether a four room apartment in town or a twenty room mansion in suburbia—should quite naturally have something to do with the breed of canine chosen. Too seldom are they given the attention they deserve.

The larger breeds such as the St. Bernard, Newfoundland, Mastiff, Great Dane and Wolfhound find the greatest happiness and health when permitted to roam freely upon a country estate, and their owner's peace of mind will be at a maximum when such large quarters can be supplied. It is rather unfair to confine these big fellows within the comparatively small usual backyard and, under no circumstances which can be well avoided, should they be compelled to live in the average town apartment. They really need a considerable amount of exercise to keep them in the best of health and spirits.

Other dogs of large proportions, yet not the excessively big breeds just mentioned, can be kept successfully in yards or runways of such size as to permit the animal a fair sprint of a hundred feet or so. Numbered among breeds in this class are the Airedale, sporting dogs (Setters, Spaniels and Hounds) the English Bullterrier, Samoyede, Collie and, perhaps, the German Shepherd Dog.

When the dog's quarters are likely to be more restricted, your selection should favor a breed of still smaller size. The Irish, Scottish, Fox, Cairn and Sealyham Terriers, the Chow and the Boston Terrier are examples.
They are all adapted to living more or less contentedly in town. They are active dogs, however, and necessarily demand regular exercise to keep them fit and in good physical condition. As a matter of fact, every breed except perhaps the smallest and most delicate of the toys requires regularity in the matter of outdoor exercise.

Men who have devoted years and better lives on country estates

The training fee is reasonable

There follow in order the toy dogs sometimes referred to as the "lap" type. Included in this category are the Pekingese, Pomeranian, Toy Poodle, King Charles, Blenheim and Ruby Spaniels, Japanese Spaniel and those rarely seen but delightful small chaps, the Yorkshire and Maltese Terriers. These are readily adaptable to city life and are faithful little fellows requiring only limited exercise. Of all breeds they are, perhaps, the best suited to the restrictions of apartment life.

If the dog may be expected to ride in a motor car much of the time, the Chow, Airedale and all the rough-coated Terriers are particularly to be recommended. Their own coats are usually sufficient protection except in really cold weather, without the need of artificial clothing. One of their great advantages in the car, of course, is their comparatively moderate size.

Any dog may prove a loyal and entirely satisfactory companion for children although some of the larger breeds sometimes are not as satisfactory as the smaller by virtue of their greater strength being a bit too much for their youthful admirers. If a large dog is considered in order that he may have an opportunity to grow up with members of the household and thus become a true pet and pal of all who are interested in his career. The main point, as far as companionship and safety with children are concerned, is to pick out a breed that has been long established and handled by mankind. In so far as such a thing can be assured, the disposition of such a dog is a matter of foregone conclusion. In the less well established breeds individual variations from the type of temperament are more frequent.

While it is difficult to advise any specific age at which a dog should be purchased, perhaps from three to eight months represent the period in a dog's life when his character and disposition are being formed. Between these ages he is old enough to stand up for himself fairly well, yet not so old as to have formed attachments or habits which cannot be easily overcome. Furthermore, it is perhaps the most interesting period for the owner who enjoys seeing his dog develop.

Much, of course, depends upon the care and treatment accorded to puppies. A person experienced in such matters can perfectly well take care of and bring up successfully an eight-weeks-old pup. One of this age requires rather constant attention, however, as well as careful feeding. Unless you are prepared to give this personal care, you will usually do better to get an older dog.

Now You Can Build Your Ideal Home

The four essentials of ideal construction today are that it be fireproof, have a high insulating value, be economical to build and economical to maintain.

Out of its long experience and its unequalled resources, the United States Gypsum Company has developed a complete line of building materials designed to provide these essentials in fullest measure.

Beginning with the interior walls, finest results are obtainable from the use of [1] USG Red Top Plaster on a Rocklath base. This plaster is the highest grade gypsum, of uniformly great strength and durability, and highly resistive to heat, cold and damp. Rocklath is fireproof, smooth and non-warping, eliminating ordinary lath that buckle and deface good plaster.

To line the basement, attic and garage, use [2] Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard. Pure gypsum cast in sheets, it makes permanent, tight-jointed, non-warping walls and ceilings at low cost.

Just nail the Sheetrock to the joists or studs. Decorate your walls with [2] Textone, the painter and decorator's wonderful new medium for textured designs in color on any base.

For the exterior, the ideal sheathing is [3] Gyp-Lap. Its fireproof, insulating and economical qualities assure comfort and safety. No building paper or felt is needed with it. Nailed to the framework, the large units brace the entire structure against wind-stresses and strains while their air-celled core of gypsum provides the strongest structural insulation known.

Finally, for a permanent, attractive exterior, you should use [4] Oriental Stucco. Scientifically proportioned and machine mixed, it needs only the addition of water for the job. Oriental Stucco Finish Coat comes in eleven mineral colors and white.

EVERYONE admires a beautiful stairway. Here the architect achieves a work of surpassing beauty of design—a beauty which necessarily must be preserved and protected.

A stairway is a permanent part of the home. Like a fireplace, or doors and windows, style tendencies do not affect it. The air of hospitality is always influenced by its charm. Surely its finish should be as lasting as its inherent beauty—a beauty that partakes of its finish.

And for stairways in America—as in Europe—Ripolin is universally selected for the preservation of interior beauty. Ripolin is chosen by those who know of it because its enduring qualities add so much to the splendor of American homes.

for Stairways Inside

RIPOLIN

THE ORIGINAL HOLLAND ENAMEL PAINT

for Stairways Outside

FOR an outside stairway durability of finish is even more essential than for similar interior surfaces. Doorway, pilasters, stately pillars—all demand lasting protection—and beauty of finish as a matter of course.

For the refinement of such exterior decoration, Ripolin, the “original Holland Enamel” discovered more than forty years ago, has been used across the seas to preserve architectural beauty. Here in America for twenty years it has served the same purpose. Here, too, its beauty, economy and exceptional ability to resist wear and the elements has invariably suggested its use to those who would make the home possess a more gracious exterior charm.

You can prove the qualities of Ripolin on small articles in the home. Ripolin can be bought in small packages from your local dealer for that purpose.

Roofing tiles are an economy, not a luxury

IF YOU are one of those who think IMPERIAL Roofing Tiles a luxury, I consider their eventual economy. They reduce fire insurance premiums, make homes less expensive to heat, and assure life-long freedom from repairs. Because they thus repay their cost, you actually pay nothing for the greater beauty and distinction of titles.

The Ludowici-Celadon Company is the world's largest manufacturer of roofing tiles. The product of our three great plants represents generations of tile-making experience. Thus our imprint on every piece of tile we produce is a guarantee of lasting satisfaction.

Numerous beautiful color plates of distinctive tile-roofed residences are contained in this elaborate brochure, "The Roof." It may give you many helpful ideas for that home you plan to build. Sent for 25c in coin or stamps to cover postage and handling. Address Ludowici-Celadon Co., Room 1128, 104 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

CRANE BEAUTY IN THE OPEN; CRANE QUALITY IN ALL HIDDEN FITTINGS

Saving space, time and endless steps in any home in which it is installed, this combined sink and laundry tub is especially useful and efficient in small apartments and bungalows. Of cream-white enamel on iron, it takes up no more room than a sink alone, and costs much less than two separate units installed. It is large enough to meet any laundry emergency and is most convenient for washing small articles too delicate to risk outside. The nickel silver drainboard is removable and fits snugly on either sink or tub. It may also be used as a serving tray. Crane plumbing and heating materials are sold everywhere by established contractors in a wide range of styles and prices. Write for new kitchen folder and bathroom booklet in color.

WASTED!

IN the uninsulated house the heat that passes out through the roof and walls is just as much a waste of fuel, and of the money that pays for it, as if the coal itself were thrown outdoors. To prevent this loss, a house must be insulated—lined with cork to retain the heat.

Armstrong's Corkboard possesses this property of retarding heat flow in a much higher degree than ordinary building materials. Engineers call it low conductivity, and it is due to the peculiar structure of cork, a mass of minute sealed air cells which offer so much resistance to the passage of heat that very little gets through. In fact, the transmission is so small that it takes 24 inches of brick or stone to give the same insulating effect as 1½ inches of Armstrong's Corkboard. Lining the roof and walls with Armstrong's Corkboard makes them practically heat-tight and saves the fuel that is wasted through the heat-leaking construction of uninsulated houses.

But this is not all. If less heat is wasted, less is needed. A cork insulated house can be heated with a much smaller plant. Armstrong's Corkboard Insulation saves the cost of the excess radiation that has to be put into an uninsulated house to offset the heat loss through the construction.

The cork insulated house is more uniformly heated and freer from drafts. Bedrooms that are opened at night warm up more quickly when the heat is turned on in the morning. It is drier and quieter—a more healthful and comfortable house in every respect.

You can't afford to build an uninsulated house. Investigate Armstrong's Corkboard. It insures you comfort. It saves you money. Mail the coupon for further information. kind of breakfast food, a new development of the talking machine, a new form of radio, a new color scheme for walls, or a new way to hang curtains—the demand for them is a good sign, the trying of them is a good indication, and the adoption of those worth adopting is proof of fair and open-minded judgment.

Part of the function of House & Garden is to report to its readers the new developments in the building and designing, furnishing and equipping and landscaping of homes. It does not claim to create styles; it presents them, as they are evolved and appear in the concrete form of brick or molding, fabric or color scheme, machinery, electrical equipment, new floors or new shrubs. The only test we apply is the test of suitability, of good taste. To disregard a movement of taste, because we are not entirely in sympathy with it would be allowing prejudice to warp our editorial judgment. We present the best and the latest. Consequently, the constant reader of House & Garden is kept in touch with developments affecting the home in many quarters of the world.

That a great many people each month are aware of this fact is indicated by the growing circulation of the magazine and the vast correspondence its editors carry on with House & Garden's interested subscribers. A great many others know that they can put their finger on this pulse of home development by merely walking to the nearest newsstand and laying down the small sum of thirty-five cents.

The Bulletin Board

THERE will be quite a cosmopolitan flavor about the January issue. It devotes many of its pages to House Building, and the houses come from many sections of the country and many lands. The sources of the small house, described in the first article, go back to England, France and Holland. Italy is represented by a Florentine villa, England by a cottage in Surrey, Florida by a house reminiscent of the Moors, Maine by the house of a collector.

For purely practical consideration we recommend the description of how a frame house is built, of how chimneys play their part in the design of a house, how to deal with the contractor and how to wire a house for radio. The antiquarian will also find suggestions for the preservation and restoration of old houses. The use of portable gas is discussed for the benefit of the country householder.

For the decorator there are pages of four-poster beds, a new and very smart small New York apartment, a Little Portfolio of Interiors from various houses—English and American—and a page of interesting items from the shop.

IN the gardening pages of January we begin a new series—The Easy Garden—in which the first steps are explained for amateur gardeners. This series will continue throughout the year. English Primroses and their cousins will be described by Mrs. Wilder, the Viburnums by Mr. Wilson, new Roses by Mr. Thomas, the making of sod steps by Mr. Carl Stanton, and designs for children's play houses in the garden. The Gardener's Calendar will continue to be both a practical guide and a picture gallery of garden worthies.

FOR some years there has been writing for HOUSE & GARDEN one "Old Doc Lemmon". He first contributed to the Gardener's Calendar years back and of late his philosophy has found a place on the Bulletin Board. This month we have turned the editorial page over to him. Just what Doc Lemmon's forebears were we cannot say. He is evidently a collateral descendent of Sam Slick, the Clockmaker, and a distant cousin by marriage to David Harum. He comes from up New York State way—somewheres in the Genesee Valley. It was there he spent most of his life and practiced his profession as a "hoss" doctor, going about the countryside curing sick cattle and farm stock. He has a farm of his own and is now retired to it, to enjoy the rest of his days. His only literary efforts appear in HOUSE & GARDEN.

THE notion that from the beginning America has been the home of the free will not bear very close inspection. Especially is it difficult to realize that so innocent a custom as celebrating Christmas was once sternly forbidden in New England, the section first settled by people who fled religious intolerance.

The anti-Christmas feeling was evident in Massachusetts as early as 1621 when Governor Bradford of the Plymouth Colony determined to stamp out celebrations as a relic of popery. In 1657 the General Court of Massachusetts provided a penalty of five shillings for each offender who observed "any such day as Christmas or the like, either by forbearing of labor, feasting, or any other way". This law was repealed in 1681 but there were still many staunch old Puritans who objected to keeping the day or letting anyone else keep it. One of these was Chief Justice Samuel Sewall, who took a fiendish delight in noting in his journal that the people were profaning Christmas and that business was going on as usual that day. Rhode Island, Connecticut and even Quaker Pennsylvania also frowned upon Christmas celebrations; in fact New York, Virginia and Georgia seemed to be about the only places where a 100% American of those days could enjoy himself on Christmas Day.

ONE of the pleasantest little books that has come our way in a long time is "All In A Garden Fair" by Alice T. A. Quackenbush, and it is just the sort of thing that will delight gardeners now that outdoors is over. It is a series of delicate and informative essays on the meanings and sources of plant names, into which are woven a lithesome philosophy and a sparkling wit. This little book is beautifully produced.

And for those who are interested in such affairs, let us recommend "A Short History of the Building Crafts" by Martin S. Briggs, wherein will be found many interesting and curious facts about the manners and customs of builders and buildings in times past.

Two reprints of excellent volumes have also come to our attention—Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer's "Art Out of Doors" and Francis Hill Bigelow's "Historic Silver of the Colonies and Its Makers".

WE ARE always intrigued by mechanics we do not understand. There is the electric clock, for example, that needs no winding because an electric battery provides some of its propulsion. The pendulum swings, and when its arc slows down there is released a pawl that allows a weight to give the pendulum a push. The springs one sees in old-fashioned clocks are singularly absent. The ticking is supplanted by an occasional click. These modern inventions may take a little of the sentimental poetry out of life, but they make existence much easier.

EVERY now and then well-intentioned readers write to us and ask "Are pictures going out of style?" And we answer flippantly, "Do the good things of this world ever go out of style?"

There may be times when pictures are less used than other times, but when the day comes that pictures shall entirely be taken away from our walls, then we will despair of humankind. We refer, of course, to good pictures—to good original paintings, etchings and lithographs and their legitimate reproductions. Bad pictures are always in bad taste.

You can consider the picture for itself, as a work of art; or you may consider it as an integral element in the scheme of the decoration of a room, valuable for the color, design and even for its framing. The latter method, we feel, brings the most satisfaction. For the esthete, who keeps his collection of prints hidden away in a portfolio, cannot share his delight, but the man who hangs them on his walls offers pleasure to all whose eyes fall upon them.

THERE is a goodly custom, to be found in houses in Philadelphia and thence south, that we recommend to all those who plan to build a home. It is providing for an upstairs living room. The living room downstairs often becomes a public place, but upstairs, it takes on the atmosphere of a home sanctuary. It can be as informal as you please, but it should be first of all comfortable. Let it have good books a plenty, an open fire, and a back stairs leading from it to the kitchen so that of nights you can sneak down en deshabille to raid the icebox.

WE HAVE a theory that people can be unconsciously poisoned by the ugliness that is about them in their homes just as a poor unfortunate is unconsciously and gradually killed by the slow seepage of gas into a room where he sleeps. The difference is that we all know gas is poisonous; few of us seem to realize that ugliness is equally baneful to the spirit. The cure for the trouble is to acquire a taste for beautiful things and an appreciation of colors used harmoniously.

There are dozens of ways this can be done, but there is no regal road to it save study—the study of books on the subject, of magazines devoted to beauty in the house, of courses at schools of decoration and even home study courses. The average householder need not be concerned with the intricacies of the historic periods,—such things are for decorators. What she does want to know is how to differentiate between good and bad lines of furniture, between order and confusion in the arrangement of furniture, between clashing and harmonious colors. She wants to know what to keep, what to discard and what to buy. She wants, in short, to make a livable home of which she can be proud. Such things are taught by home study courses now available. Their efforts and practical opportunities deserve success.

OUR FIRST STYLE

There is a pioneer simplicity about early American furniture that makes it our first and only national period deserving recognition and revival. This dining room in the early American style is in the home of the Very Reverend and Mrs. Bratenahl, at Gloucester, Mass., which is described in the following five pages

IN THE PILGRIM MANNER

The Story of How A Late 17th Century New England Country House Was Reproduced at Gloucester, Massachusetts

ANTOINETTE PERRETT

IT IS a low long-stretched house, this, the very brown of the old weathered farmhouses that have never known paint; a house of narrow clapboards and small-paned shutterless windows, of undisturbed dormerless gables; a house without deep eaves, with the most directly built chimneys, without so much as a coping on their tops. In fact, it has but three ornaments if we exclude the ship elbows on the porches. The first is the nail-studded door at the entrance, set in a narrow framework no wider than that of the windows. The second are the brackets and drops of the overhang on the main portion of the house, although both these are somehow so indigenous that they may well be overlooked in the effect of the whole. The one conspicuous ornament, therefore, is the later 18th Century classic doorway from Newport on the ocean front, with its eight-paneled door and arched toplight, its fluted pilasters and its finely-denticulated pediment. This elaborate doorway has been used not so much for itself nor for architectural contrast, but to recall a favorite custom during the next century, when just such splendid doorways were added to dress up an old and unpretentious 17th Century house on the occasion of a wedding or some other important family celebration.

Plain narrow clapboards, we have said, but we cannot let them go at that, for their charm does not lie in their plainness alone nor even in the way they have been happily framed by the broad watertable that runs low along the ground and by the overhang and end construction beams. It is their inimitable surface texture that makes them so attractive, and this is due not only to the closely-lined shadows that break their surface but to the graduated lay of the clapboards themselves. Our age is not going back to plainness but on to an appreciation of the subtle refinements that may be in-

The fireplace, which was the heart of the Pilgrim home, has been faithfully reproduced in both design and the details of equipment

The house, which is at Brace's Cove, Gloucester, and is the home of the Very Reverend & Mrs. Bratenahl, was first designed by Mrs. Bratenahl in a model. It was then executed by Belkows & Aldrich, architects, and the pine sheathing, paneling and furnishings installed by Henry Davis Sleeper

From an old house in Newport was brought this 18th Century doorway, and installed where it would face the sea. It is the one prominent ornament of the house

The south wing shown below contains the study and chapel, playroom and flower room. The roof lines and traditional narrow clapboards are seen here

The garage is a separate building, tied to the house by a high fence and sheltering a woodshed and workshop. The well sweep is an authentic touch herent in the simplest things. Old brown clapboards and shingles were picked up, for instance, for a study of their age-old tones, so that, although the exterior had to be frankly fashioned of new materials, it could be given an ancient effect. Of course, the ocean will soften the house still further to a silvery brown, whose beauty we can only suspect at present. As it is, the house has a way of responding to the varying color of the sea and sky in a most astonishing way. When the northeaster brings a driving rain, or the mist is heavy over the sea, the house seems to have all the greys, tans and browns of the rocks on the shore. When the sea is a deep blue, and great white clouds mass overhead, the house has a precision of line and a decided dark brown color, very like a deep-toned etching.

In the same way, the chimneys, for all their simplicity, have decided structural interest and beauty of texture. The great central chimney, ten feet square from its very foundation, is built up in the old way with hand-made bricks, that came from a 1720 house in Portsmouth. This chimney is exactly in the center of the main part of the house but do you notice how the doorway, which leads into the narrow front entry, as well as the window above it are slightly off center? It is by such devotion to the spirit of the old designs that a house becomes sincere and real. The main portion of the house has, for instance, as nearly as possible the proportions of Parson Capen's house at Topsfield, Mass., with a parlor on the right and an old pine kitchen, which serves as dining room, on the left.

The entry is just the width of the great

From its collection of old farming gear — the oxen yokes, and grindstones, sugar kettle, and orderly wood pile—the shed might be two hundred years old

chimney and the stairs hug the chimney wall. Here, as we enter, we have our first glimpse of early pine, for the stairwell is sheathed to the very top with wide feather-edged boards, fifteen to twenty-two inches wide. The stairs, although they came from an old house in Connecticut and although their turnings prove them to be of the earliest period, have a surprising ease in their risers, quite different from the usual steep cramped climb. There is a dignity and refinement about the balusters and handrail that make us feel that they have come from some fine old manor house in England instead of having been in the simple unsophisticated setting of our own early days. When this stairway was found, there were ten layers of paint that had to be scraped off with the utmost patience in order to set free the pine in all its mellow beauty. Every board throughout the house, whether it was sheathing, paneling, floor board, beam or moulding, had any number of layers of paint or wall paper that had to be removed. There were, too, a great many hand wrought nails that seriously interfered with the tools. Then, after all the boards had been thoroughly scraped, they had to be hand-adzed. For this it was necessary to find workmen, really craftsmen, accustomed to using the old tools in the old way. There were sixty men working on the building at one time, but there were two especially who so loved this type of work and so entered into its spirit that they did not mind the discouraging condition of their material.

In the design of the house, the difficult task, however, was not to find an example

Another view of the dining room shows the corner cupboard, and the kind of antique pieces used for furnishing both in this room and throughout the house

In planting the garden the owners kept to the bushes native to that part of the New England coast, spravely old Blueberries and Wild Roses, Bayberries, Black Alders, Meadowsweet, Willows and Sumachs

The entrance door is of nail-studded planks set in a narrow framework. After the custom of such houses, the second story overhangs the first, giving this entrance a pleasant play of light and shade of a 17th Century house like Parson Capen's but to extend the house so that it could contain all the rooms essential to a modern country house without losing its original character. On the north side of the house, there are the service wing and the garage, the latter designed to resemble an old barn and woodshed; while, on the south side, there is a wing containing the study and the chapel, the main porch, the children's rainy day playroom and playporch, and Mrs. Bratenahl's flower room. All these rooms and porches are so planned and so divided by the long corridor that they have real seclusion and privacy.

In regard to the chapel and to the natural inference that this is not a Puritan house, it is interesting to know that the original grant of land from Salem to the Penobscot, which includes this part of the coast, was given to John Mason, a member of the Church of England. Indeed there were a number of settlements by members of the Church of England. Narragansett, for instance, was one of them, these settlers coming, of course, not necessarily for freedom of worship but purely as colonists.

It is in her original model of the house with all its various wings and extensions, with all their varying widths and angles and varying levels, and in the fine correlation and subordination of all these varying parts that Mrs. Bratenahl has shown her imagination. She has an appreciation for the feeling that may be expressed by the sweep of the simplest roof-line. But she has not stopped there. She has carried her enthusiasm into the much more difficult problem of assembling varying rooflines into one pictorial whole. She has, moreover, an even rarer interest; for, in place of the usual ornament, she has depended upon shadows.

The house has not only been brought in this way into an intimate relationship with the play of light and shade and with the color and atmosphere of its New England coast, but it has been placed so that it directly faces the sea and so that its main porch looks out upon Brace's Rock. Near

OLD DOC LEMMON TALKS OF CHRISTMAS

And Gives His Views on the Value of Straight Thinking

"CHRIS'MAS ag'in! By jing, I never git over bein' surprised how quick it comes 'round ev'ry year—an' I've knowed goin' on eighty Chris'mases, at that. Ain't a bit too quick for Elviry an' me, though, 'cause this year it means we're goin' to see our boy Ally an' his wife an' kids fer the fust time since 1920. Had a letter from him t'other day, sayin' as how he had to come East on a bizness trip an' was goin' to bring the fambly along all the way from Nebrasky an' run up to visit with us fer a spell. Do ye wonder we're all of a flitter, with Elviry plannin' all the vittles she's goin' to cook up—them partic'lar ones Ally allus used to be so hankerin' fer—an' me samplin' the cider ev'ry day to make sure it's gittin' hard enough?

"The more I see o' life the stronger I be fer havin' things like them to look for'ard to—Chris'mas an' Ally's comin', I mean. They give ye a sort o' grip on things, as Ab Peters used to say when he seen me double-halterin' a hoss whut had to have his teeth filed. Without somethin' real like them to wait an' work fer a man's mighty likely to git into muddled ways o' thinkin', an' that ain't a-goin' to do his soul no good—no sir-ree, not one leetle mite o' good!

"MEBBE ye remember Ab—years back, he was the huntin'est coon hunter 'round this part o' the county. Long an' rangy he was, with a voice onto him like the whistle o' the Montreal Express away off yonder, an' the best strain o' hounds I ever seen. Used to breed 'em hisself, Ab did—many's the time I've hitched up in a hurry an' druv over the mounting to his farm when things warn't goin' jus' right with one o' his comin' litters.

"Wal, Ab he fair used to live fer the coonin' season. He tied to it tigher'n a pizen ivy vine to an appletree. An October night with a full moon an' a couple good hounds meant more to him than anythin' else, I guess. Yep, I know it did, fer when the time come that he had to give up his huntin' he went plumb to pot.

"Inflam'tory rheumatiz was the trouble, so the doctors said; likely it was follerin' his dogs through the swamps night after night an' autumn after autumn that give it to him. Anyhow, it crippled him up so bad he never could git 'round ag'in without crutches, an' so he jus' kind o' lost his grip. The one thing he'd allus tied to was gone, an' he got into muddled ways o' thinkin'. Not havin' nothin' partic'lar to aim at, 'cordin' to his lights, he jus' petered out . . . . an' out.

"THE way I look at it, with purty near eighty years o' hindsight back o' me, it don't make a turrible lot o' diff'rence whut ye pick out fer a mark to shoot at, so long as it's fair an' honest an' don't work no harm to nobuddy else. Coon huntin', doctorin' hosses, ownin' yer farm free an' clear, old-time religion

—why, there's purty near as many kinds o' goals as there be people to go after 'em. The main point is that they keep ye thinkin' straight—ye've got to have 'em, er ye'll git into trouble. I've been 'round hosses all my life, an' I never seen one yet that could be drove far on a strange road without a pair o' reins an' a hand to hold 'em.

"SO, with Elviry an' me, Chris'mas—specially this Chris'mas—means a lot. To us it's a kind o' landmark, a picture, like, that's helped us to try an' keep seein' straight as the years went on. More'n any other day o' the hull three hundred an' sixty-five it clears the fog out o' your thoughts. I cal'late mebbe that's whut it was meant fer in the beginnin'—that, an' to show the world whut road to take. Them Three who followed the Star never would've got there if they'd been thinkin' muddled-like, any more'n they would if they hadn't had the Light to steer 'em.

"That's it—the Light. An' when I says the word I don't mean only whut the Bible meant by it. I was brung up an Old-line Methodist, but to me that Star that was so bright in the East was a hull sight more'n jus' a marker fer the place where He was layin'. Far's you an' I know, there was jus' as much of the Spirit up in that Light as in the Manger 'way down below it. Have we any proof that the real use of it wasn't jus' to make them Wise Men see straight an' follow whut they seen was right?

"EVER since Ally was a leetle tad we've gone to the door on Chris'mas Eve to look fer our own star in the East. I don't rightly know the name of it, whether it's Venus er Juniper er whut, but ev'ry time, barrin' clouds, we see it hangin' in the same spot jus' over the hemlocks along the ridge o' Cooley's Mounting. Quiet an' bright an' steady, with only the leetlest shimmer now an' then like it's tryin' to send us a message, somehow it gives us a feelin' o' peace that kind o' settles down all around—over the house, the farmyard an' barns, the white, still flat o' the meadows 'tween us an' the hills.

"I dunno how it is with other folks, but to me Chris'mas wouldn't be Chris'mas without that star. It's the answer to such a lot o' things, the sort o' answer ye can b'lieve without askin' why. It helps ye to see straight, an' yet it's somethin' itself that's too big to understand.

"Mebbe it ain't intended that we should understand—leastways, not entirely. An' when ye come right down to it, I figger that's jus' as well. I don't know, ner Elviry don't know, an' onless Ally's l'arned it somewheres out West he don't know, neither—whut our star really is. But it's so sure an' clear an' comfortin', off yonder over the dark line o' the trees, that oncertainity don't make no diff'rence. Do ye think mebbe it might be the same one that shined down on old Bethlehem that fust Chris'mas night?"

A GARDEN HOUSE DOOR

However simple it may be, good design is a requisite in the architectural features of a garden. About this garden house door there is a commendable dignity and simplicity. Its architect was Mott B. Schmidt and the owner, Mrs. F. C. Havemeyer, at Roslyn, L. I.

A charming mantel decoration for a child's room at Christmas time consists of a Madonna plaque of colorful Majolica ware and a pair of tiny trees to flank it hung with stars, icicles and silver baubles

From Max Schling

Too little attention is paid to the outside of the house at Christmas time. In addition to a wreath on the front door a loop of fruit and Laurel leaves might be hung on the iron balcony railings. A tall plant stand holding Christmas greens is seen through the window

Above is a suggestion for decorating a table in the living room. Here a ship model banked with greens and holding countless mysterious packages is strung with slender ropes of Holly and topped with sprays of Hemlock, in the manner of ships on the high seas at Christmas time. On either side are candelabra

DECORATING THE CHRISTMAS HOUSE

Delightfully festive looking on account of its gay Christmas decorations is this paper-paneled entrance hall with its rope of Laurel twisted about the stair rail and its hanging lantern strung with Holly leaves. In among the Laurel are colorful California berries and Bittersweet. Decorations from Max Schling

There is no universal relation between the size of a fruit and the length of time required to produce it. Some of the most rapid-growing vines, such as the Melons and Gourds, yield enormous fruits within a few weeks after flowering. The Wax Gourd plants shown here illustrate the point

CURIOUS FRUITS FROM MANY PLANTS

In Solving the All-Important Problems of Species Perpetuation

Nature Has Gone to Far Extremes of Ingenuity and Oddness

E. H. WILSON, V. M. H.

FRUITS are the one product of the vegetable kingdom with which all peoples of the earth are familiar. No matter what race is thought of, no matter how low the state of civilization, no matter whether the people live in the country or city, in mansion or slum-tenement, fruits that are good to eat and pleasing to the eye are well known. But such fruits are comparatively few in number and with rare exceptions are the product of long civilization by man in many lands. What few people know, and fewer realise, is that every type of vegetable growth—the mould which appears on jam or bread, the Seaweeds, Mosses, Ferns, Grasses, Oaks and Pines, the humblest herb, the thorniest shrub, the loftiest tree—all at some period of their lives produce fruits.

The fundamental principle of living bodies is to increase and perpetuate themselves. In the plant world this is accomplished in two ways: by the multiplication and subsequent breaking away of vegetative parts; by the production of fruit containing seeds. The first method results in the perpetuation of the same individual form in all its peculiarities; the second gives rise to a new generation.

Properly speaking, a fruit is merely a specialized plant structure developed after fertilization, containing the seed or seeds. Its mission is to aid and insure the dispersal of the seeds over as wide an area of the earth's surface as possible. To accomplish this purpose Nature has intrigued deeply. She has fashioned fruits of every conceivable size, shape and form and fitted them in such wonderful manner that the currents of the air and of the oceans, the swift waters of the rivers and the still waters of ponds, the animals that roam the earth and the birds that flit through the air are all employed as agencies of dissemination.

(Above) Among the most interesting trees of the Southern Hemisphere are the Banksias, not large in size but formed of beautifully figured wood and carrying strange foliage and flowers of considerable beauty. Their cone-like fruits are weird looking and often covered with bristles

Some fruits, for example those of Fungi, are so minute that they have to be magnified a hundred times before they are visible to the human eye; others, like those of the Melon family, are so huge that one is as much as a man can conveniently lift. In any fruit store may be seen in tempting array many kinds of luscious fruits varying greatly in form and size from the Cherry to the Peach, the Apple to the Melon, Banana to Pineapple, Raspberry to Blueberry, Strawberry to Cranberry, Filbert to the Pecan and Brazil to the Cocomanut. In any waste city lot where weeds have sprung up the curious will find fruits varying even more greatly. One need not have a garden for their study; roadside, meadow or woodland all will yield on investigation a wealth of fruits marvelous in variety of forms.

In a vast majority of plants the perfecting and ripening of the fruit and its contents occupies but one year, or part of one year. In some plants like the Dandelion, Thistle, Fireweed, Willow and some Dog-

BROOKSIDE GARDENING

A Simple Outdoor Sport That Requires Little

Work In Either The Making or The Maintenance

RICHARD ROTHE

FORTUNATE is the man who has a brook on his country place, for he has opportunity for one of the most fascinating forms of gardening. Nor are brooks so rare that the appeal of this sport will be limited. Of course you may leave your brook in the primitive state of Nature—which means that it may get out of hand—or you may presume to give Nature a lift by improving on her methods.

The first thing to investigate is the firmness of the banks. Heavy winter thaws and turbulent summer rainstorms

A brook at Glenside, Pa. This photograph was taken in March when the foliage was dormant and the outline of the brook pronounced have a way of washing the outer sides of sharp curves. Since the use of cement or brick-walling would be out of place, build up these sharp curves with large-size rocks, thus securing the shore line.

Other than this precaution, no formula, style or rule for touching up the lines or building the bed of a brook can be given save that, while our object is first of all to keep the brook open and flowing, we should never forget to make it beautiful.

The process of such work can best be studied in the accompanying illustrations

The same brook in mid-June, with vegetation in full flower. The work involved securing the curves with rocks and then planting

In order to make a fernery beside this brook, Mr. Rothe, who created the two gardens illustrating this article, built up rock pockets of sandy loam and leaf mold

The second year after planting the brook fernery has practically covered the rock construction. It is located in a semi-shaded spot such as ferns appreciate of two brookside gardens before and after planting. My first suggestion is to study your brook in early Spring. In March the vegetation for the most part is still dormant, but because of the mobility of its water course the brook may possess rhythm in motion, melody in sound and a picturesqueness that strikes the lyrical chord.

Brookside planting depends much on the arrangement and selection of material. Brooks and streams must remain harmonious parts of the surrounding locality. If your brook is one that roams through wooded sections consisting of tall trees, restrict your planting to a minimum of native shrubs, perennials and Ferns. In shady situations, the banks of a brook frequently prove ideal for the establishment of hardy Ferns. High and steep banks in such cases will call for rockpocket construction for the purpose of holding especially prepared soil of rich sandy loam and leaf mold. The catalogues of our leading hardy Fern specialists give exhaustive lists of species and varieties, with descriptions and other valuable information. As these are in the hands of the majority of garden owners I refrain from going into details.

Along the lines of natural water courses traversing sections of a lawn the semi-aquatic denizens of lowland regions and river deltas will bring revelations of a beauty we hardly dream of.

Not until we commence exploring the possibilities of our brooks do we realize the gorgeous effects gained by contrasting the light graceful forms of Ferns with the robust leafage of Senecio Veitchianus S. Wilsonianus and S. Clivorum as well as the strong massive growth and glaucous lustre of Funkia Sieboldiana and F. Fortunei. In fact all the various species of Plantain Lilies adapt themselves surprisingly well along the banks of running water. Also we may enjoy the decorative beauty of Iris Kaempferi, I. orientalis and I. sibirica in a perfection

ENLIVENING the DULLNESS of BROWN

A Thoroughly Respectable Color, Brown and Its Affinities

Can Be Used for Rooms of Smart and Brilliant Tones

ETHEL DAVIS SEAL

USED rightly there is no more decorative color than brown, and used wrongly there is no color more dismal. And yet, used wrongly, brown has been the supposedly safe standby of many an inexperienced home furnisher since before brown walls and mission furniture followed brown walls and golden oak. Brown has been "safe." This very safeness nearly has been its decorative undoing. It has grown to mean to us the less interesting and more utilitarian aspects of home furnishing—the brown of rep and tapestry, the brown of leather and wood, the brown of walls and floors, the serviceable brown of whole room schemes, failing somehow to be enlivened in the slightest degree by the usual bland harmonies supposed to result from the use of green or rose or blue in accents and combinations.

We have become so accustomed to the everyday use of brown in our homes that, like the small object obscuring the sun, it is difficult for us to see around it to the more decorative possibilities to be found in this same color, when considered from an entirely new angle of vision. We know full well the effect of such humdrum combinations as brown and green, brown and blue, and brown and rose. But who has realized the possibilities in combining brown with black, enlivening its smart somberness with joyful bits of henna, yellow and gilt? Who knows that brown is dismal only when seen in some heavy absorbing fabric such as oatmeal paper or woven rep, while it is positively gay with high lights and luster when found in the crispness of sparkling taffeta, and gayer still when seen in the ground of colorful and vividly patterned cretonne?

The brown room may be brilliant with color, instead of being heavy and dull. It may radiate distinction instead of being quite commonplace. It may be springlike and gay instead of being wintry and drab. But all these fine results depend upon knowing how to make the most of this friendly and useful color, instead of just accepting its easy utilitarianism which has descended to us from the past.

Used in the decorative new way, brown should be studied from three somewhat different angles of opportunity: first as a link-color; next as a mass-color; but most of all it should be considered in the light of its ability to form the base for many a startlingly colorful room scheme.

In a room scheme the link-color is found to be any neutral surface of utility, whether large or small, against or upon whose enhancement are placed the major elements of furniture, ornament or design.

As a link-color we see brown chiefly in backgrounds. It is used in walls, but not in the dead brown of the walls of Victorian hallways and dining rooms; rather in the creamy tones of tan, of cafe au lait, and of putty, which, stretched in gracious expanse over the walls of present-day rooms, in flat stipples, in painted canvases paneled with self-toned moldings, in two-toned effects that blend unobtrusively to the value of one; or in the more positive brown and cream of scenic papers with the charm of old etchings, in the gold of handmade Chinese paper, of gold-toned burlap or linen, in even the weightier paneling of marvelous waxed brown-toned wood.

As a link-color we see brown in the background color of floors: plain taupe-colored paint when the floor wood is poor; neutral walnut stain when the floor of soft wood is regular and fine; pale brown instead of the usual blatant butter-color of hardwood accomplished by just a wee bit of brown coloring being rubbed into the open grain of the wood before final finishing; the taupe brown of plain rugs, the mixed pale brown of rugs Oriental and Chinese when these are neutral enough to take their place in the category of backgrounds.

And finally brown may fall into its status of link-color in smaller objects when seen as the background tone of cretonne with a harmony of bright color woven against it; in the tan cowhide and cloth bindings of books predominantly present.

CARING FOR CHRISTMAS PLANTS

With a Minimum of Intelligent Attention Plants Received at Christmas Can Be Made To Flourish Many Months

GEORGE W. KERR

THE growing of potted plants, especially for the holiday season, has become an enormous business; in fact it is computed that the money invested in the culture of flowers and plants in America exceeds that of the steel and iron industries.

Apparently we have all become flower lovers, or at least the great majority, otherwise these skilled growers of lovely plants would not have an outlet for the many thousands, or, rather, millions, of flowers that are annually raised.

The pity of it is that after they reach our homes so many of the beautiful plants, through lack of a little attention, are allowed to die while yet in their prime, instead of giving joy for many weeks to come. Although some of the Christmas plants are seasonal only, such as the forced bulbous plants, yet there are others which with reasonable care will retain their full beauty for a long time and with proper attention to their requirements, may be carried over for another year.

The old-fashioned Jerusalem Cherry has always been a popular Christmas plant, the cherry-like scarlet berries in their setting of dark green foliage have such a warm, cheery, and seasonable appearance. This highly ornamental little plant does not require a great deal of attention beyond regular watering, and plenty of light and sun. It may be used on the table occasionally, but should be kept in the sunny window as much as possible. If the berries and leaves begin to drop, it is usually a sure sign that the soil has been allowed to become dry. The pots are so full of roots by the time the berries have taken on their glossy-scarlet coat, that plenty of water is absolutely necessary to keep the plants in health. In the temperature of the living room where it rarely exceeds seventy to seventy-three degrees the majority of our Christmas plants will remain in full beauty for many weeks.

Should the presence of insects be suspected sponge the leaves with soapy water to which a little kerosene has been added. They are easily kept down if taken in time.

There is no reason why the plants should be discarded after the cherries have dropped; they can be grown to make finer and bigger plants for the following winter. Cared for as suggested, the plants may not lose all their fruits until early spring, and even then the foliage is always green and bright. Sometime during spring the plants should be partially "dried off" for a time by gradually with-

HOW I CREATE NEW ROSES

The Mystery of Hybridizing Roses Is Explained

by One of Our Foremost Amateur Growers

GEORGE C. THOMAS, Jr.

THE fascination of testing new varieties of Roses and watching for the first appearance of their much-heralded blossoms is equalled only by the thrill of seeing the first bud open. Every amateur Rose grower loves it and can imagine the still greater excitement of awaiting the blossoming of the seedling that one has grown with one's own hands. In this experience lies one of the most worth-while of all gardening activities.

The production of new Rose seedlings is within the power of any amateur gardener. True, it requires some study, some skill, much patience, but it is practical; and with proper time and care it is not difficult. Perhaps my own story and how I learned to breed new Roses will show you the roadway most easily.

Every year I bought all the new varieties. I stood the winter killing of the weak ones—the single flowers of the single ones, and all the faults of most of these new untested plants just to get occasionally one really good variety—a Rose that was better than the others; many a disappointment but sometimes a thrill. I looked upon Pernet-Doucher and the others as magicians, and I would not have ventured to trespass into the hidden mysteries of Rose breeding had I not needed hardy everblooming climbers for my Pennsylvania climate.

The English and French hybridists did not give me this Rose I needed. American breeders were few; so I tried to breed it myself, expecting failure, but urged on by two strong forces—the desire to try the unknown in Rose culture, and the wish to go on with my horticulture in freezing weather when my outside garden was sleeping during the night of winter. So I decided to try my fortune, and, of course, I got all the literature there was. In 1913 there was no American Rose Annual—no real American Rose Book, and only a little reference here and there in English books such as Pemberton. I found books on seed germination and on botany, which gave me what afterwards proved to be the foundation necessary.

MAKING A START

The process was one of elimination, and it took seven years to perfect my race of Roses. But such labor is not necessary unless one wishes to produce some new race; the ordinary breeding of interesting seedlings requires no such time or calculation. Everybody hears of the parents of many new Roses, and if you tabulate these you get a good idea of how many really fine present-day varieties are first generation crosses. Look at Los Angeles—a first cross between Mme. Segond Weber and Lyon-Rose. Run through Ketten's catalog; you will find many first generation crosses of value noted. At the present there are a lot of good new Roses with Druschki as a parent. Lyon has given two well known Roses in combination with Druschki, and it looks as though the longed-for yellow Hybrid Perpetual was at hand.

In my own experience Druschki produced an everbloomer of semi-climbing habit in Bloomfield Perpetual, when crossed with the Dwarf Wichuraiana Iceberg. Does it get you? Of course it does!—what else promises so much mystery and fascination with continued work among Roses when fall has stopped you outside?

A RECORD OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

Look at the record of what has been done since the first steps towards our present-day Roses; Tea and Hybrid Perpetual crosses gave the Hybrid Tea; Lutea (Austrian Briar) crosses with the Hybrid Perpetual gave the Pernetiana; continued crosses of Tea, Hybrid Tea, Hybrid Perpetual and Pernetiana gave us our present-day Roses—as for example, Los Angeles goes back through Weber to Hybrid Perpetual and Tea, and through Lyon to Briar and Hybrid Perpetual. Wichuraiana crossed with Hybrid Tea gives us the Hybrid Wichuraiana; for example, Dr. Van Fleet, a hardy, climbing Hybrid Tea with one blooming season. The Hybrid Wichuraiana, Aviateur Bleriot, crossed with the Hybrid Tea, Caroline Testout, gives us Mrs. George C. Thomas, everblooming and quite hardy. Rugosa crossed with Hybrid Tea gives us Hybrid Rugosas, and so on. At present I am crossing the climbing Teas for greater diversity of tender climbers.

All kinds of combinations are possible; for habit of growth, foliage, perfume, form, everblooming, hardiness, color—why, the harvest is boundless. Try for what you most want—you can breed it. It is possible to do this without a large greenhouse. You can breed your Roses outside and germinate the seeds inside; and raise the seedling babies during the winter while their parents are dormant outside; or you can breed them inside during the winter, and plant seeds the following fall or outside in the summer. You can do it on a small scale or a large scale. My own greenhouse for seed germination and other work is only 40 feet long, and I have over 2,000 Rose seeds planted in one side of it.

AS TO PARENTS

Oh yes! you must know some of the best Roses to use for seed parents, and it is a lot easier not to try to breed species to get quick results. Mme. Caroline Testout is a fine seed plant for Hybrid Teas; so are Weber and Grange Colombe and Mme. Melanie Soupert and Illchester. See!—I have given you the four colors—pink, white, yellow and red; not so bad a tip for a start.

In Climbing Teas I find that Reve d'Or and Dijon are satisfactory seed parents, both giving fine seed and germinating them promptly. Dorothy Page-Roberts fathered plenty of Roses of everblooming character when crossed with the Wichuraiana Sylvia—the latter as the seed parent. There is an idea for you—use Roberts on other Wichuraianas and try other Hybrid Teas on Sylvia.

Incidentally, Bloomfield Abundance, one result of the Sylvia-Dorothy-Page-Roberts cross, stamps everblooming on its offspring when used as a pollen parent; and if a tall grower is wanted, it does that too, as evinced by the new Rose, Bloomfield Perfection, which came from Danae and Abundance. By the way, Danae is a splendid seed parent.

I am not giving away secrets in these matters—you can find all this and a lot more by studying the American Rose Annual and catalogs that give breeding; it is not hard to get data about Roses to use.

Going on a little, we come to the ways of crossing these Roses for new seedlings:

Commence on any of your established Roses outside, and plant the new ones you require—that is easy.

For inside next fall you can dig up dormant outdoor Roses and plant them in big pots or tubs; place them in your little greenhouse and grow them. One seed pod holds among Hybrid Teas an average of ten seeds; one bush will hold ten pods easily—generally more—ten plants a hundred hips or a thousand seeds. Ten seed parents don't take up much room inside. The pollen parents—if you have ten of them, and they should be fine bloomers—

A LITTLE PORTFOLIO of MODERNIST INTERIORS

The little boudoir to the right was created by Ruhlmann. Its color scheme is white and gold. The bureau and small round table are of macassar wood and ivory and the chairs of macassar and silk coverings. Gold moldings set in patterns of unusual modernist design relieve the white of the walls

Since the purpose of House & Garden is to report to its readers the latest phases of taste we show in the Portfolio this month six rooms created in the modernist style and exhibited at the Paris Exposition des Arts Decoratifs this summer. The dining room above was created by the celebrated Lalique

The two striking features of this modernist dining room are the chairs and the wall paper. The latter is a painted paper designed by André Marty and produced by Zuber. The furniture is the creation of Sue and Mare. While the table is not unlike many familiar designs, the chairs are modernistic

The angular aspects of this entrance are typical of modernist design. You find it in the cubist painting of the risers and treads of the stairs, in the design of the rug and in the shape of the table and stools. The table consists of four little tables with a central bookcase. Klatz & Company, decorators

CLUB HOUSES for COMMUNITIES

There Can Be No Finer Incentive for Town Betterment than a Well

Designed and Fully Equipped Building Dedicated to the Neighborhood

EVERY community has a sort of magnetic core to which the people of the neighborhood are drawn for diversion. Some of these centers of local life are better than others (and some communities are thereby made better than others) for the simple reason that a specially planned community house offers advantages which cannot be given by the things that so often have to serve as substitutes—the station, the store or the street corner. Large towns and cities have their libraries, museums and more or less public clublike organizations, so it is really to the small country town and village that the community house comes as a particular blessing. Here it serves not only as a club house for everybody, with all its chances for mingling and recreation, but makes as well a splendid place for the housing of the town headquarters, the post office and other such public necessities.

Many such community houses have been built within the past few years, and all of them have more than justified the fine spirit of the citizens who made them possible. The story of the one at Waverly, Pennsylvania, of which photographs are shown on the opposite page, is well worth relating because it shows what can be accomplished in a very small town. The building was given to the village by one of the leading citizens as a memorial to her husband. The donor also provided for the permanent maintenance of the building itself. The cost of running the Community House is covered by a Contributors' Fund to which, every year at Thanksgiving, all the people of Waverly are asked to make some donation. The amounts of the individual contributions are never made known, but each contributor may vote in the election of a board of trustees that manages the House. Of the village's 600 population, 500 vote in this annual election. Additional means for paying the expenses are obtained from the various activities of the Community House—from the canteen, billiard room, bowling alleys; from admissions to movies and dances; from the proceeds of an annual fair, from the sales of gasoline and oil at

THE ONE-MAN GREENHOUSE

Annuals for A Winter Hobby—The Secret of Perfect Seed Germination—The Sweat Box for Cuttings

F. F. ROCKWELL

SEVERAL times during these little talks on the one-man greenhouse—of which this is the fourth and final—I have striven to stress the fact that there is no reason under the sun why the gardener should feel constrained to confine himself to the comparatively few flowers which one ordinarily finds recommended for greenhouse use.

When it comes to flowers which may be grown from seed, this holds just as true as it does with the more permanent things. As an illustration of the fact that there is no real reason for sticking within the standard greenhouse lists, let me quote a few lines from an article I wrote for this magazine back in 1914. They were written with fear and trembling as to what the professionals might say, for in those days I was a beginner myself. I said: "I feel somewhat doubtful about giving this comparatively little known flower (the Snapdragon) a place among the plants recommended for greenhouse growing. Not as a result of my own experience with it, which has been most successful and pleasing, but because in the several books and articles which I possess on the subject, I have never found it mentioned." Today, of course, "Snaps" are one of the standard greenhouse flowers, and you can pay up to $3.00 per dozen spikes for them in the retail florists' stores. All of which goes to prove that you need not be afraid to try the un-recommended things, and can follow your own fancy, guided, of course, by common sense.

There is not space available here to go into details concerning the many things which I have grown successfully under glass, but a few of them I do want to recommend particularly. One of these is Lobelia tenuior, a recent and entirely distinct type, with flowers about four times the size of those of the common Lobelias, and born on tall wirey stems well above the foliage.

Another is Clarkia, an annual of shrubby growth, much better known in Europe than here. It is one of the most attractive flowers for cutting which I know, and lasts for a long time, as the buds open up, one after another, to the end of each branch. The variety Salmon Queen, is especially pretty and deserving of use.

The annual Larkspurs, which may now be had in a number of charming shades, including the wonderful new pink "Exquisite," are easily grown to perfection under glass, and are desirable to add to one's collection because of their erect habit of growth, which helps give variety to a grouping of other flowers, just as the tall spikes of the perennial Larkspurs give variety to the hardy border. Sweet Alyssum is also indispensable for use in the greenhouse, where it will bloom for weeks, trailing gracefully over the edge of a bench, or bordering a path or a pool's edge.

In the small greenhouse you may not have the space, nor wish to devote the time, necessary for growing the standard giant "Mums" of the florist's store. You can, however, find a very satisfactory and easily grown substitute in the Comet, and in the newer Astermum types of Asters.

The Calendula is another of the humble annuals which used to be rather despised for greenhouse use, but which has of recent years come into great popularity with the variety Orange King, which happened to be one of the very few flowers approaching the orange and henna shades which were the fashionable rage a few years since. Another little annual, not at all known as a greenhouse flower, but just as easily grown as the Calendula, and much more graceful and attractive in form, is the African Daisy, Arctotis, which is a particularly long-laster as a cut flower.

Cosmos, which so often comes to untimely end in the garden out-of-doors, may be had at its best under glass, either late in the autumn, or late in the spring. A few plants in pots, or in a bed, while growing very tall, will not require much space

THE CASE FOR HOT AIR HEATING

Another Method of Heating and Ventilating

Which Is Sound and Comforting

ETHEL R. PEYSER

ONE of the strangest things about us is that we do much talking about how public buildings should be built, ventilated and heated, and yet with no thought whatever we sometimes build our homes, in which we live constantly, and accept anybody's or nobody's advice as to what to install in the way of heating plants and other equipment which may add to or detract from the bill of health.

In these pages there have been discussed from time to time both hot water and steam heating. In this tale we are going to discuss the warm air heating plant—not to win you over to it, but simply to outline it in its best forms, for probably no apparatus for home use has endured more from an incompetent past than has warm air heating. At present, and for some twenty years, the best designs have been disseminated by the rank and file of manufacturers and conditions are excellent. So let its past be forgotten, for according to users and makers the warm air heater is now a heater for the whole house rather than for a favorite room and adds to the proper ventilation and humidification of the home.

CONCERNING THE PIPELESS

Before we go further, let us not give you the idea that we are talking of the pipeless heater (also a warm air device), which we do not advocate for general use, but only special ones. With it, all the room doors must be kept open on the central hall or halls, or they will not get heat. Should there be illness of an infectious type in one room, the disease would spread over the house. Furthermore, rooms should not forfeit their privacy even to be heated, and with the pipeless heater, this renunciation is the primary condition of heat comfort. We should rather be cold than to have to keep the doors of our room open!

So back we turn to legitimate warm air heating, for whether we like it or not, it is being used, and as faithful stewards and intelligent homekeepers we must know what it is.

The principle of warm air heating is that of convection and a combination of methods involved in all heating processes. Air is drawn in and is heated by coming into contact with hot metal surfaces. In the best apparatus, the cold air is taken in, not through one pipe and heated en masse, but passes through a number of pipes surrounding the heat chamber of the furnace, in which it is thoroughly heated, resulting in small streams of air which are passed up through separate heat ducts to the various rooms, where the heat emerges warm and moistened from the register in the wall or floor.

HEAT WITHOUT RADIATORS

One of the advantages of this system of heating is the obviation of the radiator which usually takes up room. At this point we stop to say that we are far from condemning our good and loyal radiators, for to their systems can be added ventilators and humidifiers too, giving one all the comforts of the American home.

In the old days, when warm air heating was used with badly designed systems, the chairs often used to take it upon themselves to fall to pieces from the over-dried air in which they lived. Throats used to get dry from the same reason and the silver used to tarnish from the fruits of fuel combustion. At present, means are taken to avoid these faults and the air reaches the room unsullied and improved. Of course other heating plants keep up the "dry" habit too and need humidifying devices as well as the warm air heating equipments. It is the need of humidifying devices and dry air heat that makes our imported antique furniture fall apart.

The best furnaces supply an even distribution of warm air throughout the house, dependent on the scientific proportioning of the various warm air discharge pipes and the cold air leads. Furthermore, the pipe and heating conditions always involve a consideration of the glass surfaces in the special home which is to be heated; as well as the amount of exposed wall surface; air leakage around doors and windows; and the amount of exposure to wind and weather to which the house may be subjected. However, every room can be kept warm as the heat currents have special air ducts to each.

These equipments include a humidifier, which keeps the air in condition. We are prone to insist upon heating plants of public buildings purveying air to us with the proper amount of moisture and in a well ventilated manner, but usually forget that the air of the home needs the same nursing. We should have at least from forty to sixty-five percent of relative humidity in the air to keep us healthy. In winter, we often need more heat than would be necessary if the relative humidity was as high as it should be. We are cold in winter with too low relative humidity as we are hot in summer, when the relative humidity is too high. So, in the winter you can save fuel if you have some way of adding the proper moisture, for health and comfort, to the air of your house. However, it is not possible to have as high a degree of humidity in the winter as it is in the ordinary summer temperature, due to the fact that condensation will take place on the window panes, etc., to such an extent as to cause trouble. This is true if the humidity is over 50% in severe winter weather. The humidifiers attached to these systems of heating work so well that they need little or no extra care. On warm days, the humidifier has little moisture, and on cold days, the proper amount also. Therefore, this addition to the heating plant conditions the air, keeping it moist and in normal circulation, so that colds, sore throats and membranous irritations occur less frequently.

In addition to the humidifier on some equipments is found the usual thermostat which lowers and raises the drafts and obviates the necessity of repeated trips to the cellar and the house is heated and is kept warm without wasting fuel.

As with all heating plants, there is also installed the water attachment to insure hot water.

Some of the ventilating systems are so efficient that the air is changed from three to five times every hour. This is done by a series of vents. These vents are usually put on the wall near the floor or on the floor and the registers put close to the ceiling on the wall. All homes do not need special ventilating systems, although many may.

FRESH AIR

In most States the law (about 20 years old) ordains that every school child shall have thirty cubic feet of fresh air per minute. Besides this it has been found that air must, besides being fresh, be kept in motion. Why should not homes, too, have proper aeration? By proper we mean air in motion as well as fresh air, which is obtained in homes from the air leakage often without ventilation devices. The ventilating system with this warm air heating equipment aims to keep the air in motion as well as fresh.

The GARDENER'S CALENDAR for DECEMBER

This Calendar of the gardener's labors is planned as a reminder for all his tasks in season. It is fitted to the Middle States, but should be available for the whole country if for every one-hundred miles north or south there be made a difference of from five to seven days later or earlier in operations. The dates given are for an average season

SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
The wise gardener profits by experience in proportion as he applies his reasoning powers to each year's disappointments and successes. He is a living example of the fact that it need never be too late to learn		1 All the cane fruits which are not laid down for the winter should be tied to suitable supports so that they will not be whipped about and broken by storms.	2 The first part of December is the best time to sow alpine flower seeds in the cold-frame. They lie dormant over the winter and germinate in the spring.	3 Suet, Sunflower and Hemp seed are the best foods to attract the winter birds. Supply them abundantly in spots protected from snow and sleet.	4 You can have an abundance of growing flowers in the house, with very little trouble, by planting Paper-white Narcissi bulbs in pebbles and water.	5 Dwarf fruit trees need annual winter pruning, which may be started now. In general, shorten by one-third the upward growth of the past season.
6 Fairly well-rotted barnyard manure is an excellent winter mulch for perennial plantings. Spread it evenly and not more than two inches thick on the average.	7 Garden ornaments, such as concrete or metal urns or jars, that may catch and hold water, should be covered to prevent their filling, freezing and breaking.	8 Although fruits of many sorts can be stored and slowly ripened in the cellar, they need periodical sorting over lest decay start in and spread.	9 The cold-frame producing season can be considerably prolonged if the sashes are provided with regular straw mats or loose hay to check the night's cold.	10 If the ground is bare you still have a chance to gather up any dead flower stalks that are left and burn them. This is sensible garden sanitation.	11 Seed flats lose half the normal period of life if left out over the winter. They deserve to be cleaned and stored under cover in some dry outbuilding.	12 House plants need fresh air in abundance. Protect them from direct freezing, of course, but don't hesitate to set them out on damp, warmish days.
13 Rhubarb can be forced in a warm cellar if the roots are planted in boxes and kept moderately moist. Provide as much light as possible.	14 Getting the most out of the vegetable section of the greenhouse implies succession planting of Radishes, Lettuce, Spinach, Beans and other easy growers.	15 Liquid manure is an excellent house-plant stimulant. It is prepared by putting fresh manure, or pulverized sheep manure, in bags and steeping in water.	16 Boxwood and some of the less hardy evergreens will "sun-scall" during severe winters unless they are protected by burlap, cornstalks or evergreen boughs.	17 Insects unchecked often mean the death of house-plants. One remedy for them is a soap solution tintured with nicotine and sprayed on.	18 Several good concentrated stimulants are manufactured for the garden indoors. They are clean, easy to apply, and bring about quick results.	19 Successful mushroom growing hinges upon good spawn, the right bed and correct temperature and moisture. The experiment is well worth trying.
20 Deciduous tree and shrub planting can be done as long as the ground is unfrozen. A heavy mulch will extend the season by keeping out the frost.	21 Broken and dead branches ought to be removed from the trees now while other outdoor work is virtually at a standstill. Use a good saw for clean cuts.	22 Growing Lilies-of-the-valley in decorative bowls is easy and well worth the effort. Get the "pips" sold specially for this purpose, and plant in fibre.	23 There is benefit as well as pleasure in a personal garden note-book. Going over it at this season will furnish many good ideas for next year.	24 Peony plantings should never be heavily mulched. If the crowns of the plants are more than three inches below free air they are likely to come up "blind."	25 The living Christmas tree, now obtainable from several growers, is far more satisfactory than the old cut kind. It can be planted outdoors after the holidays.	26 San Jose and oyster-shell scales, those pests of the orchard and some shrubbery, require winter spraying with strong lime-sulphur solution or soluble oil.
27 Low-lying areas around the grounds, especially if they are planted, ought to be provided with drains to carry off winter rains. An open trench may serve.	28 A stiff brush vigorously applied is much better than harsh scraping as a means of removing wintering-over larvae from the bark of tree-trunks.	29 The little plants of the rock garden are likely to suffer severely during the winter unless evergreen boughs are placed over them to prevent thawing.	30 Silvery-white and long-lasting, the dried seed stalks of Honesty are splendid winter flower decorations. Honesty is a biennial, easily grown in the garden.	31 Over-watering pot plants should be guarded against, as it is likely to lead to sour soil. A good soaking once a week is better than a little every day.	In gardening, more than in many other hobbies, one's interest remains alive from year's end to year's end. There need be no month, no day, without its activities of the present, its retrospects, or its plans for the future

The furniture of old Savoie

There is decidedly an inspiration in the stately Italian palaces and villas that has kindled the imagination of our modern architects. Many are the new homes upon our countrysides that show this mellow influence . . . For houses such as these the Hampton Shops have prepared lovely things that closely follow the Italian and the Spanish feeling. ¶ In the delightful group above, for instance, the credenza and the sofa of jardenier velvet indicate unmistakably these tendencies. And in the Hampton Building may be found many other wonderful pieces and accessories that are in perfect harmony with sturdy homes developed in the Latin tradition.

CARING FOR CHRISTMAS PLANTS

holding water; this will cause them to drop their leaves and we now prune them back to within an inch or so from the main stems.

They will then be rather unsightly and so are placed in some inconspicuous place—even the cellar if it is well lighted, but free from frost. After all danger of frost is past take them out of the pot and remove part of the old soil before re-potting them. Plunge up to the rim of the pot in the open garden but place a few inches of ashes under it to keep out earthworms. From this time the plants must never suffer from lack of water. By fall each should be a fine bushy little tree one foot or more high and through and well set with fruit. Allow it to stay in the open so long as frost does not threaten, thence removing to a sunny window.

The Jerusalem Cherry is easily raised from seed which may be purchased from any seed store or if you received one as a holiday gift, save your own seed from the ripe fruit. Handle much as you would Tomatoes or Peppers, and after the seedlings have been once transplanted pot them up singly. They will require re-potting twice, the last time into their fruiting pots which should be five or six inches in diameter. When the nights are becoming warm plunge them in the open as already described.

The Cyclamen is even more popular nowadays than the Jerusalem Cherry; given ordinary care, a well grown plant will bloom continuously from December until April, and then may be carried safely through the summer months to gladden us with its dainty butterfly-like blossoms another winter.

As the Cyclamen blooms fade remove the flower stems entirely, pulling them away from the base. Any yellowing leaves are treated in the same manner. In the dry atmosphere of the room the plants are thirsty creatures, and as it is fatal to the soil with its multitude of hungry roots to become dry, they require water every day.

There is no more beautiful or accommodating flowering plant which responds more readily to living conditions than the Cyclamen, the reason of its present popularity. A plant well furnished with thick, quiescent marked leaves, and surmounted with from twelve to twenty lovely flowers is something to be treasured over, and the important fact that it retains its beauty for so long should beget the owner's best care and attention.

Along in spring where the leaves and the flowers are gone, water is usually withheld until the soil is almost dry. Then is the proper time to repot it. Turn the plant out of the pot; shake off the majority of the soil, and return it to the pot which should in the meantime be thoroughly washed inside and out. Use rich loamy soil to which a little manure and bone meal are added (these may be dispensed with if unavailable). In potting be careful that the bulb just rests on the face of the soil. Now water thoroughly and place in some conspicuous window, or, if frost is over for the season, plunge the plant in a partially shady spot in the garden. Water daily throughout the summer and bring indoors just before the first frost. Perfectly cool conditions best suit Cyclamen during the summer and early fall months.

BROOKSIDE GARDENING

rarely noticed in average gardens. Iris pseudacorus, aside from its stately foliage and handsome yellow flowers, serves as the best soil-retainer when planted direct down on the waterline. Its strong root system is reliable in withstanding rushing floods. On comparatively dry sections of our elevated banks all the varieties of Iris germanica materially add to the enrichments of floral arrays in May.

During June and part of July one of the most conspicuous features in brookside gardens is the various tall-stemmed feathery panicles of herbaceous Spiraeas; the stateliest thereof is the European species Spiraea aruncus, a hardy strong-grower producing loosely branching flowers of a creamy white shade. The species S. Filipendula, S. Camtschatica and S. ulmaria bloom white, while the panicles of Spiraea palmata attract attention by their vivid carmine-red. Desirous of witnessing a glorious climax in the floral June array we cannot omit reserving ample space for plantations of Astilbes. Of the white flowering kinds we use chinensis, A. grandis, A. japonica and A. thunbergii and a few clumps of the tall midsummer blooming species Astilbe Davidi. Most important for our purposes however is the new Astilbe Arendsii—hybrid of medium height producing large, very showy upright panicles in white, cream, soft pink, light and salmon, Cattleysa-pink, lilac-pink and bright carmine-rose.

Yellow and orange tones are maintained from May until July by large clumps of Hemerocallis from midsummer into fall depending on the flowering of the different species of Senecios, blending very agreeably with the lavender and purple of the hardy native Asters.

In conclusion let me call attention to dotting the immediate edges of the brooks with clusters of Myrica palustris and some Caltha palustris as well as using freely moisture-loving Primroses for charming vernal garden displays.

NEW SMARTNESS FOR YOUR FLOORS

Thirty Minutes a Month—and the Ponsell will keep any floor in your home as spotless and bright as your dining room table

Regardless of the floor—hardwood, parquet, tile, linoleum, cork or cement—the use of the Ponsell will keep it new! Walk on it—track dirt across it—dance on it—let grease spatter it—5 minutes and the Ponsell renews it.

And then think of the delight, the pride of Ponsell-appearing floors. With the Ponsell in her home, no woman need make excuses to her friends or to herself. Thousands of Ponsell users confirm this. They have done away with the back-breaking, hand methods of the past.

These thousands of users know the pride of beautiful floors.

Moderately priced. Operated by electricity. Consumes less than 3¢ worth of current an hour. No skill or strength required.

1. Keeping my floors beautifully polished is now a pleasure—just guiding my Ponsell gently along. Gone is the backache of hand-polishing.

2. My Ponsell is equally good on my large stretches of bare floor or on the narrow borders between my rugs.

3. "Will it go into corners and up to the baseboard?" Certainly it will. There, I polished that corner, not a dull spot left.

4. And now I can polish around and under my furniture without having to move it. My Ponsell reaches narrow awkward places without any trouble. Hasn't it all become easy!

5. Scrubbing my kitchen floor is just as easy. I simply attach the scrubbing brush and watch my floor turn snow-white. "Better than a sloppy-mop?" It surely is!

6. Now a few strokes of the "squeegee", (which came with my Ponsell), dry up my floor in a jiffy. Oh!—by the way, —last Fall my Ponsell saved me a lot of money.

7. With it, I had no trouble at all in bringing back to its original beauty, my stained, scratched dining room floor.

8. All I had to do was first to spread Varnish remover on—I let it dry for six or seven minutes and then—

9. I attached the steel wire brush armed with a pad of steel wool and went over the prepared portion of the floor.

10. Off came the old dirty finish, leaving the wood as fresh as new. I then attached the sandpapering pad and smoothed and brought out the grain.

11. All I had left to do was apply a little liquid wax with the Ponsell waxing brush and—

12. With the Polishing brush I brought the wax to a high lustre and behold! My floor is spotless and gleaming for all to see.

ENLIVENING BROWN

on the bookshelves, and serving as the foils for the more occasional bindings of brilliancy, for the accents of scarlet and gilt. Brown thus used as a link-color may find its place very necessary in any room scheme developed along quite different color combinations, not changing these from their own chosen harmonies, but rather furnishing a friendly background of character.

Now, the mass-colors of any room scheme are those local colors seen predominantly in any large objects designed to be the principal size-units of the decorative plan, and which are placed against the backgrounds already discussed. Such objects are pieces of wooden furniture, upholstered or overstuffed sofas or chairs, curtains, and so on. Brown as a mass-color is found in the miracle of walnut, antique maple, ruddy mahogany and satinwood, as it is used today in furniture distinguished for its beautifully selected woods, its fine lines and lovely design. It is found in the covering of overstuffs and other upholstered furniture with materials selected from the tones of taupe to those of tête de nègre, and which show surfaces very different in texture from the brown leathers and tapestries that we used to associate almost exclusively with furniture upholstered in brown. While brown curtains, sometimes needed in the scheme to weigh a combination that otherwise might be almost too brilliant, instead of being humdrum affairs, shimmer so gaily in the sun that their folds are turned to gold.

AS A DOMINATING FEATURE

Even when brown claims the major part of the scheme, strange to say, it may be used in many of these same ways. The real difference lies in a change of attitude toward the part brown is to play in the plan, and instead of allowing it to submerge its personality in that of the other colors, it is forced into the rôle of chief character-part by the way in which it is handled in relation to the other component parts of the scheme. In just such measure as this is done do these lovely and modern brown schemes, making the most of new materials and new combinations of color, accomplish a decorative last word of what brown really can accomplish.

TWO SPECIFIC ROOMS

I think it will be especially helpful to consider each of the two rooms pictured here in two different color schemes, both founded on using brown in new ways. The room shown in the first drawing should be furnished in walnut furniture of Spanish or Italian character, or a mixture of both. In both schemes to be suggested for the color treatment of the room, the Spanish varguano of walnut has an interior of pomegranate red and its exterior is enriched by brasses. The rest of the walnut furniture consists of the table to be set in the middle of the room, a small octagonal table, four upholstered chairs, two of which are to be selected the other two being larger and more comfortable type; and an Italian sofa with the exposed wood frame and the carved apron.

In one color plan let us imagine the room almost entirely brown: copper tan walls, waxed brown woodwork, rich brown floor, taupe and brown rug, shimmering brown changeable sunfast curtains, quite heavy in weight, the wall hanging of rich shaded brown with so little of other colors as to render them negligible, the chair upholstery in brown. All these brown, more in tone, which renders the more interesting, and all of them a cool rather than ruddy. In this brown scheme, echoing the old red note of the varguano interior, the lamps, the long table are of red, taupe, very coppery in tone. The sofa upholstered in dull red, and in the side of the room that does not show red tooled leather books fill the built-in shelves.

In the second color plan to be suggested for this room, using the same

A New Measure of Fine Car Excellence

THOSE who had owned Packard cars for years were convinced that the Twin Six was the ultimate Packard. They did not believe it was possible to improve upon it.

But now these veteran Packard owners are buying new series Packard Eight cars.

And they say that the Packard Eight has qualities they had never learned to expect in any car.

The new Packard Eight cars give their owners:

Wider, more comfortable and luxurious bodies which retain all of the traditional Packard grace and beauty;

More and still smoother power combined with a new ease of control and freedom from gear shifting;

An unusual economy of operation;

And, best of all, the new improvements—the chassis lubricator and the motor oil rectifier which double the life of the car. More, they emancipate Packard owners from the drudgery of constant oiling and greasing operations. On the new Packards proper lubrication is almost automatic.

The owners of Packard Eight cars have had to revise their ideas of how good a fine car can be.

MAPLE, pine and butternut speak of the sturdy Pilgrim Century. From the first period of American Cabinetry comes the inspiration for the Danersk Pine Tree Desk.

No desk like it was ever made before, and yet, each detail of design and color is authentic. It is made as though a workman of olden days were transported to our time and told to make the most beautiful desk he could design for our modern homes!

Mahogany and Satinwood speak of the romance of the seas and the first days of our Republic. Duncan Phyfe and McIntire brought all the fervor of our fight for independence into the ornamental symbols of their furniture.

These two desks typify the Danersk idea in furniture. We are not antiquarians. We are a part of the living, breathing present. Our furniture is intended to be an expression of our American civilization today, and like our architecture, it is made in a spirit of grateful acknowledgment of those fundamental principles of beauty and symmetry that are our choicest inheritance.

furniture and many of the same ideas, with equal success more color is introduced. And in these suggestions will be found material for "jazzing up" many a too dismal brown room, despite its widely differing furniture. Against putty walls the wall-hanging is of blue, a mixture of old blue and peacock blue with enhancements of old red, brown and tan and black in the design. The window hangings are of blue and brown brocade, though the material could be simpler with equal effect, especially in another type room. The chairs are upholstered in red brocade velvet, the sofa in plain dark taupe-brown, with pillows covered in old peacock blue. On the octagonal table there are grouped a copper service, having some pieces enameled in light peacock. Books bound in red leather are to be found in the built-in shelves. The lamps have brown pottery bases with orange and blue bands; the shades are of parchment with stripes of red, blue and brown. The table runner is of a dull old blue; the mirror is framed in red and gold; the rug is of brown and taupe. The risers of the stairs are painted an earthenware red, the treads are marbled in black and gray and tawny tan; the stair rail is of black wrought iron. This general handling of colors constitutes an easy as well as an effective method of enriching a too heavy brown scheme.

Of a much lighter character is the second drawing showing a dining room. And the two schemes which are about to be suggested for its color development may be applied also to any room suited to the light and newer using of brown. In the first scheme to be suggested the furniture is of dull honey-toned maple, emphasizing the golden tones of brown. The walls are of pale putty, the rug is of taupe. The seats of the chairs are of apple green armure; the screen is of apple green uncut velvet with green-gold galloon bindings and pale brown prints seen as panel-inserts. The curtains at the window are in pale brown, apple green and cream cretonne with pale brown valances; the glass curtains are of pale apple green silk gauze, and the inner draw curtains are of pale brown silk. The green pottery dishes and bowls are filled with yellow and green flowers and fruit.

The second development of the same room uses furniture in mahogany and satinwood, emphasizing the redder and more tawny mellow tones of brown. The walls have been given cream panels surrounded by putty-colored borders enhanced by lines of black. The floor is a rich henna, and on it there is laid a taupe and black rug. The cretonne side drapes at the windows are cinnamon-grounded with leaves and stems of brown, flowers of orange, yellow and cream, outlined in black. The glass curtains are of orange silk crepe, the draw curtains of lustrous black satin; the valance is of cinnamon-colored taffeta. The seats of the chairs are of burnt orange mohair in a self-toned diamond pattern; the screen is of black velvet with gold galloon bindings and print-inserts etched in brown on cream.

THE SOURCE OF THE WINDSOR

IN THOSE early days before and immediately after the Revolution when Philadelphia was the palpitating center of American civilization and the most important city on the Atlantic seaboard, it produced many articles of household adornment that have since become common to us. Not the least of these was the Windsor chair.

The earliest record we have is a Windsor mentioned among the articles in the inventory of a Philadelphia widow, dated 7th day of July, 1736. Five Windsors were mentioned in the inventory of Governor Patrick Gordon of Philadelphia in the same year. From that date on Windsors are commonly mentioned. They were shipped out or "exported" to the other Colonies. We find in 1765 advertisements of them in New York papers and the fashion spread rapidly. The manufacture of Windsors in Boston apparently did not start until 1786. In that year "The Independent Chronicle" of Boston carried the advertisement of an Ebenezer Stone who claimed to make Windsors "painted equally as well as those made at Philadelphia". Old newspapers in Hartford, New Haven, Providence, and New London advertise Windsors, some made in those cities and some "imported" from Philadelphia. Windsors were rarely found in the South, and such as were used were brought from Philadelphia and New Jersey. By the close of the century the fashion for Windsors had died out. The revival of their popularity came with our own generation.

Where Windsors came from before they appeared in Philadelphia is a matter for conjecture. They evidently were of English origin, brought to Philadelphia long before 1736, possibly by Governor Patrick Gordon when coming to the Colony doubtless brought with him much of his household furniture.

Among the early advertisements the "Pennsylvania Chronicle"—June 1770—is one for "Windsor Chair Plank". This was evidently used for the seat, for in the best Windsors the seat is a solid board, never two pieced together. Pine, which is easily worked, was commonly used. The legs and stretchers, on the other hand, are often of maple, the top rail and spindles of hickory, white oak or ash and the arm rail of maple, hickory or oak. Often these chairs were painted the two popular colors being Indian red and dark green, with occasional pieces in black, brown, drab and, in the case of children's Windsors, yellow.

There is no doubt that many a death is caused by illness which would not have been had it not been for bad air conditions. The ventilation and heating of houses will soon be so indissolubly joined that you will never think of installing a heating plant, whatever it may be, without proper ventilation systems, weather strippings and house insulations. These things—all but the furnace—have been considered as structural "caviar", and unnecessary, but soon it will be proven that without such assets, too much health and too much wealth are needlessly squandered.

Haphazard airings of the house by flinging wide the doors and windows waste fuel and cause drafts which breed colds and other ills. The forward-looking housekeeper and economist will, when building or when installing any type of heating plant, think of health and wealth and comfort in terms of proper ventilation and air conditioning. This must apply not only to warm air systems but to the popular and efficient hot water and steam systems.

HEAT IN SHORT ORDER

If the warm air system you install lives up to what the best makers claim for it, it will be found to be easily managed and swift to respond to demands upon it. It is flexible, for you do not have to wait for steam to be generated to thermal altitudes nor for water to rise to around 180° Fahrenheit. The moment you light your furnace, the air begins to circulate, for it is the habit of air to circulate when heated, and the house begins to warm up. So with the lighting of the fire, the house soon begins to feel warmer. This system is under control at all times, because of its direct and positive action. In cold weather when the rooms cool off, the temperature can easily be raised by merely opening the drafts. The thermostat enters here and automatically takes care of these things for you.

However, no matter how fine a heating plant of any description or type you may have, your chimneys must be in perfect order. No furnace will function without having its "lungs" in flawless condition.

There are two types of warm air heaters: the blower, or fan type, and the one called the gravity type, which has no fan or blower to spread the circulating air. In the small residence the gravity or blowerless type is used. Often, however, blowers or fans are added to send warm air to rooms which are in far distant wings and which are therefore difficult to heat.

But, in one of the best types of warm air heaters, tubes, through which the cold air passes to be heated, can be commandeered for a difficult room and the heat carried there without any blower at all. In this case there is no need to hug a register in one favored room because another is untenable.

In the best warm air systems, the fruits of combustion which used to tarnish the silver and offend our ol-factory nerves are taken care of by a system which provides for pulling out of the gases through the chimney and not through the room. Furthermore, the furnace is so built that all heat generated goes to the rooms to be warmed into the cellar, for the outlet of the first-class furnace is in direct contact with the fuel, but is separated from it by air tubes and asbestos insulation.

However, the best system of air heating or any other heating system will fail unless the installation is consummate experts. They approve of having the installation made by the manufacturer or his salesmen, whenever possible.

We should never, should we not, tell us that we had diphtheria, typhoid, or any other disease, and then, after installing a heating system, find ourselves in a hospital, being placed in certain spots, this cannot be done, they say. An efficient doctor of engineering, to another who is willing to accept their feelings, and the result is adequate heating during the remainder of the year in which it is installed to have heat. Therefore, you go to the very best of the system who will give you the best advice, though he is more experienced than another, and even though he has a chance of losing you as a customer. This cannot be over-emphasized. Most of the bad heating is the result of the temperamental buyer who accredits the heating engineer with a proper amount of thermodynamic standing.

In some houses where the service wing in which the family live, move and have their meals, has often been found cold, heat this wing with steam. In the masters' wing with warm air. The steam heat can be left off at any time and when the master returns to the house, the warm air furnace is turned off and turned on at a moment's ease and dispatch.

If you go to the proper heating system engineer, he will be able to tell you whether your house is best heated by the warm air system.

A COMBINATION SYSTEM

Another type of warm air system combines hot water heating with warm air. With these are used radiators in remote rooms to insure heat in all other places, the warm air is used. Sometimes, too, a steam system is combined with the warm air system. In this case a separate furnace is used so that outdoor porches, eaves, glass and other such chambers are well heated, especially those which are over an unexcavated space of ground; for with no suitable partitioning, the heat cannot be put in.

The double system of hot water keeps the air in circulation, yet any of these systems intelligently applied and the house adapted to it can be made to work miraculously.

The DUO-ART Reproducing Piano

THERE are certain of life's pleasures, which require trained perception fully to enjoy. Music is one of these, probably the greatest; and one where training to hear its beautiful messages, pays the greatest return.

This training the Duo-Art Piano provides. To what music in the home has always meant—happiness, entertainment, quickened spirits—it adds the vital element of culture. It trains appreciation in young and old, in the only possible way—through frequent hearing. It reproduces scholarly, correct performances of fine music. It brings the playing of the masters to the fireside.

In the great educational institutions of the world, this instrument—the Duo-Art Reproducing Piano—is in daily classroom use. Through it the students learn style, interpretation, and musical appreciation.

In countless homes throughout the world it is also teaching—sometimes imperceptibly—sometimes consciously directed but always surely.

Added to its joy-bearing mission, music has taken on infinitely greater home importance through the invention and rapidly extending adoption of the Duo-Art.

THE CASE FOR HOT AIR HEATING

In the making over of small or old-fashioned homes, all things being suitable, the hot air system can be put in with less marring of the ancient architectural scheme, for the register takes the place of the radiator, a modern accomplishment with a too modern flavor, while the register is not a modern appliance and takes up no floor room.

Many a tale has been heard through the register in the olden days! But now, as each room has its own air duct, this gossip source has vanished and thousands of homes, schools and public buildings have comfort and privacy.

The fuels used in these furnaces are usually wood and coal. Only in some instances may oil burners be advantageously utilized.

The right sort of warm air heating system is no cheaper than any other installation, but it is claimed to be a healthy and normal method, insuring a saving in health-maintenance costs. Some of the advantages claimed for warm air heating are the following: Ventilation, humidification and heat are supplied all at once; heat and moisture automatically furnish and preserve the health of furniture and folk; they heat any room, no matter how the wind blows; they use less fuel than steam or hot water systems; registers and not radiators are used; fresh air is continually being brought into the house and heated; and large quantities of air are warm but never superheated.

Before we close we must add that registers must be placed according to the advice of your heating firm.

Thus, we leave with you another way of heating your houses, neither advocating nor decrying it, but just listing it as a part of building economics.

HOW I CREATE NEW ROSES

take up just about that amount of room.

Roses have the seed parents' mechanical outfit, and the pollen necessary to start that machine into production right in the same flower; in plain English, the male and the female organisms appear on one bloom. When the pollen becomes ripe, it automatically fertilizes the nearby pistils and seed results. Everybody knows pollen—that golden brown dust appearing on the anthers at the end of the stamens; the pistils which receive this pollen for the seed-making process are in the center of the Rose, and may be told from the pollen bearing stamens easily because they have no pollen.

Since in a natural state each flower pollenates itself, cross-bred Roses must be produced by cutting off the stamens before the pollen before it gets ripe, and then, when the pistils are ripe, placing on them the pollen you desire from your selected pollen parent.

"Not so complicated," you say. "But when is my flower ripe for the pollen?" Why, when, if outside, the bees come to get the honey—when the honey is showing on the ends of the pistils in sticky, dewy drops of moisture. You can see this best with a magnifying glass, but it is very plain even to the naked eye. Now, if outside, you must protect your flower, because if Mr. Bee comes for that honey, he will probably bring other pollen from other flowers with him on his hairy legs, and then you get his cross and not the one you want; so if outside work is being done, you must protect your flower by covering it with gauze after cutting off the stamens. After you dust the pollen on the plant cover with gauze in like manner, if outside. The pollen must be ripe, just like the pistils, to insure the cross. To tell this, you must note that when you touch the pollen it sticks in golden dust to your finger, coloring it.

If you are doing this work inside it is unnecessary to cover your flower with gauze, and you have no fear of wind carrying pollen to your bloom. Inside work seems surer, although fine outside results may be obtained; in fact, Nature herself has made quite a few crosses. For example, it is generally admitted as a fact that chance fertilization between the common China and the old Red Four Seasons produced Rose de L'Île de Bourbon. This Rose was the forerunner of the Bourbon Perpetual, one of the parents later of the Hybrid Perpetuals.

At one time new varieties were secured entirely from seeds of chance fertilization, and only recently I received a seedling for test which appeared as a new variety, in a Rose hedge composed of Alberic Barbier and Cherokee.

When working outdoors, pick your flowers for pollen early in the morning, and mature them in the shade of water until your pistils are receptive for the pistils require heat to mature and the pollen dries up in the same heat and becomes inactive. Inside in winter this is not so essential. Always pollenate your seed parent several times, and if possible with different flowers of the same variety.

Within a few days remove the gauze, and if the pollination is successful, the seed pod will shortly show signs of swelling. This means that it is slowly ripening.

The next and concluding article on this subject, in the January issue, will contain instructions for handling the plants during this ripening; for subsequent care of the seed pods; planing of the seed and methods used in their germination; the culture of the young seedlings and means for their multiplication by propagation.

More emphatically than ever, America confers the crown of supremacy on the new 90-degree Cadillac.

If the ovation accorded this new 90-degree Cadillac could be made vocal and articulate—a roar of applause would resound from one end of the nation to the other.

This extraordinary endorsement is being expressed in a demand that blankets the map of America. It is a demand that sprang up spontaneously the moment the new car appeared—and has swelled steadily in volume ever since.

On the one hand, the most impressive exhibition of confidence and approval the American people have ever accorded even the Cadillac—on the other the still small voice of other-car salesmanship endeavoring to explain it away.

Twenty-two times the same thing has happened—the penalty of leadership repeats itself each year—and for the twenty-second time, with more emphasis than ever, the public confers the crown of greatness and supremacy upon Cadillac.

If you would share the feeling of delight which is crossing and recrossing the country—just ride in this new Cadillac.

BENGAL-ORIENTAL RUGS

*If Your Rug Is Wrong
Your Room Cannot Be Right*

A commonplace but useful piece of furniture can be tucked away unobtrusively, but the floor covering dominates the room.

We have outgrown the weaves of forty years ago. Today, if a worthwhile Oriental rug is beyond your means you can possess the BENGAL-ORIENTAL rug—a rug which embodies all of the characteristics of a hand woven Oriental—not only in coloring and design but in texture as well.

Then, too, it is woven entirely in one piece—seamless; and the fringes are belonging fringes—not sewn on.

The Bengal-Oriental is all rug—no stiffening or weighting by artificial means; and because it is all rug it can be repaired and washed when soiled as though it were a hand woven rug from Persia.

otherwise; and they will not only add greatly to the garden under glass, but will also furnish a wealth of flowers for cutting for weeks on end. Another long neglected annual to have regained social position during late years is the Blue Lace Flower Didiscus. Whatever other flowers you may grow for table use, you surely want this one. Its delicate beauty of form and color give it a place entirely its own. It is particularly effective when used with some light yellow or lemon-colored flower, such as yellow Verbenas, or Calliopsis Golden Wave, or Bicolor Nana. Both the Verbena and the Calliopsis should, by the way, be grown on their own account in the indoor garden.

Other things there are which I can merely mention in passing. Mignonette, of course, for its unmatched fragrance; the Silk Oak, Grevillea, which makes a stately and impressive decorative foliage plant, you can easily grow yourself from seed; Baby's-Breath, Gypsophila, with its filmy cloud of delicate foliage and tiny flowers, quite indispensable for using with other plants, and with cut flowers, for the most artistic results; Heliotrope, which will shoot up in straight rugged little trees from seed, of which you should "pinch out" the tops, when they are six or eight inches high, to make them branch nicely. If you want some real fun, save a dozen or so of the most vigorous, to train to standard or bush form, which may be done readily by keeping the young plants tied up to light bamboo stakes, and rubbing off all the side buds as they develop. Under this treatment the plants will grow with astonishing rapidity, and if given larger stakes each time they are repotted, at the end of six or eight months they will have made quite sizable little trees with bushy heads of attractive and fragrant heliotrope blooms.

The growing of flowers from seed in the greenhouse can be made almost 100% proof if you will take the trouble to follow out these instructions.

First prepare a suitable soil which to start the seed by taking a part of your regular greenhouse soil (described in a preceding article) and two parts humus, peat, or leaf mould. The humus or peat may be purchased from most seed houses; leaf mould should be rubbed through a quarter-inch wire screen before using. Of the three, I much prefer the humus.

Second, prepare a "sweat-box", which to start your seeds. Pick the warmest bit of bench space you have available, remove all soil from the seed flats or pans can get all direct bottom heat possible; closing the bottom of the bench to the ground with building paper will confine the heat; if this is not sufficient, to get a temperature of 65° to 75° in the bench, a small oil-stove can be used to supplement the heating pipes under the bench. Then make a light frame, just the width of the bench and four to six feet long, covered with glass, and fitting fairly tight.

Either ordinary shallow flats, or earthenware seed pans may be used. Fill up nearly full, and then give thorough watering, all the soil water to absorb. Then sow the seed, taking plenty of time to get it thinly and evenly distributed. Cover with a very slight sprinkling of humus. Very little seed should not be covered at all, merely pressed firmly into the surface after putting on a thin layer of humus before sowing the seed.

The two great secrets of success in getting seeds to germinate well are to give them plenty of heat, and to keep the surface of the soil constantly moist. But the more heat you give, the more difficult it is to keep the surface moist. Consequently watering becomes very important. As fine seeds are easily washed about on the surface, collaring in one or two spots, only the very finest rose spray nozzle should be used and that very carefully. But to do really perfect job of watering your seeds, take one of the patented greenhouse irrigation nozzles, and have it fitted into the center of a three-fourths inch iron pipe cap. Screw the cap tightly onto an eight to ten inch piece of iron pipe, with a hose thread at the other end. Your plumber can quickly make up this little device for you. This outfit will give you a fine floating mist for watering, which will not disturb the very finest seed, and will enable you to saturate the soil thoroughly, thus providing ideal conditions for the germinating of seeds, and the infancy of plants.

The closed frame or sweat-box will be found useful for many other purposes besides starting seed. Cuttings will root more quickly and surely in it than in the open; and plants kept in it for a short period after repotting, until new root-growth has been made, will have ideal conditions.

CUTTINGS FROM PLANTS

Some of the plants in your greenhouse—and plants for outside use too, for that matter,—you will wish to propagate by cuttings. Most of the so-called "bedding" plants, such as Geraniums, Coleus, Paris Daisies, are increased in this way. But that is not all, for there will be many individual plants among the things you raise from seed, which you can perpetuate only by making cuttings. Some particularly delicate shade of color in a bunch of seedling Snapdragons, for instance; or a brilliant Verbena; or an unusually dark Heliotrope. Also growing your own Rose bushes, and having as many as you can possibly use!

In your sweat-box, or a part of it, put about four inches of clean, sharp, medium-coarse, builder's sand, such as is used for mixing concrete. A layer of coarse peat, or something similar, will keep it from running down through the drainage cracks in the bottom of the bench. Next, make your cuttings, by cutting off pieces of wood, three to six inches long. Generally, these can be had from new growth, which has ripened sufficiently, so that it is no longer soft. You will quickly learn what just the best condition is, but to begin with you can use the "snapping test", which consists merely in sharply bending the wood, such as you propose to take cuttings from, between the thumbs and forefingers: if it breaks off clean, with some difficulty, it is too old and hard; if it bends and crushes without breaking, it is too young and soft; if it bends somewhat, and then snaps easily, like a String Bean, you have the right condition. Make a clean cut, with no bruised or broken bark at the edges, and strip off the leaves clean, from the lower half. If the upper leaves are large, as with Geraniums and some other plants, they should be cut back a half to two-thirds—the object being to reduce evaporation. Soak the sand thoroughly before putting in the cuttings, which should be inserted to a depth of about two inches, with the sand pressed firmly around them. Put them just close enough not to touch, in rows two to three inches apart. Do not water again for several days, but syringe tops lightly once a day if they seem inclined to wilt much. In a week or ten days the "callous" or slight swelling which precedes rooting will take place; and in one to two weeks more roots will develop. The little plants should be potted off as soon as the roots are a quarter to half an inch long. Put them in two and-a-half inch pots, using regular greenhouse soil, with about twenty per cent of sand added. Fill the soil in each pot by tapping the bottom soundly against the bench as you fill it, a knack you will quickly acquire. Keep the baby plants shaded from the mid-day sun for a few days and then watch 'em grow. Shift them to larger pots as they fill those that occupy with a "ball" of roots.

The growing of vegetables even a beginner always wants to experiment with, whether he continues to grow them or not. To be perfectly frank there really is less reason for growing one's own vegetables now than there was formerly, because increased water production in the South, and greater improved transportation, have made available a much greater variety of vegetables, at more reasonable prices than used to be the case. Nevertheless there is no comparison in quality between the wilted, lifeless vegetable you may buy, that have been shipped long distances and handled several times, and the crisp, toothsome tenderness of things right out of your own soil.

EASY VEGETABLES TO TRY

The easiest of all vegetables to grow, and the one you will probably grow even if you do not grow any others, is Radishes. Plant them in the coolest place you have. Work an inch or so of sand into the surface of your bench soil, mark off rows three inches apart, and drop the seed very thin so they do not touch. As soon as the third leaf shows, thin out to at least a half inch apart, leaving the stocky stemmed plants which will make roots. There are several varieties, with very light foliage, especially recommended for growing under glass, but personally I like the Crimson Giant Globe, which has quite heavy foliage, better than any of these because of its superior quality and because it can be used for a long time from one planting. Rapid Red and Hailstone, white, are two of the best very quick growers, and serve together make an attractive display.

Then of course there is Lettuce. This is much more difficult to succeed with, especially the heading varieties. But I will let you in on a little secret: grow it in pots! Transplant the seedlings to flats, and before the plants crowd, shift to three inch pots, and later to fours. As the heads develop these will have to be put seven or eight inches apart each way, and should be "plunged" or half buried in sand, soil, or sand and ashes, into which the roots will rapidly spread, where all watering can be confined to the bench, without wetting the plants.

A SUPERB

This modern room designed and executed in Paris illustrates the use of modern Schumacher fabrics

BROCADE

WITH THE IMPERIOUS SIMPLICITY OF L'ART MODERNE

IN the bright, hard green of jade, glistening with the lustre of rayon and shining threads of gold, this design superbly combines grandeur and simplicity.

From edge to edge the brilliant pattern of broad interlacing leaves all but covers the jet-black ground. Sweeping in lines, bold in conception, it is so beautifully proportioned and balanced that it can be used successfully in the decoration of large rooms or small.

Paul Follot himself—one of the masters of L'Art Moderne—created this design. Perhaps you remember it at the Paris Exposition of Decorative Arts as a frieze in one of the rooms of "A Modern Embassy"? Or saw it with other fabrics now in the collection of F. Schumacher and Company in the Roubaix-Tourcoing pavilion?

The reserve of line, the conscious simplification characteristic of these new designs, are both soothing and refreshing.

Your own decorator, upholsterer or department store decorating service will gladly arrange to have you see these Schumacher fabrics. And attend to their purchase.

How to have a more Beautiful Home

It is not necessary to spend lavishly either of time or money to perfect your home. Charming homes, instinct with personality, are being developed for people of moderate means. There are many too busy to devote time and thought to such an undertaking, whose beautiful homes bespeak infinite patience in the creation of a perfect whole.

How this can be done for you at no greater expenditure than you would make yourself is explained in "Your Home and the Interior Decorator." This book with its interesting story, its delightful illustrations in color, will be sent to you without charge upon request to F. Schumacher & Co., Dept. C-13, 60 West 40th St., New York. all. This method requires more hand work, but I have always found it much more certain, and during the first few weeks' growth, the crop will take up less space than if set out in a bench. If you wish to try growing in a bench, however, work plenty of well-rotted horse manure into the soil, set the plants seven by seven or eight by eight inches apart, and after they are half grown, and begin to cover the ground, water only on very bright sunny mornings wetting the leaves as little as possible. Grand Rapids, a non-heading variety, is very delicious and tender when grown under glass. Of the heading sorts, try Big Boston, or Wayahead, and for your own delight, Mignonette. Remember that Lettuce is a favorite of the green aphid, and they will be sure to find it, so you must fumigate or spray regularly to protect your crop.

Tomatoes are not difficult to grow under glass, and as they can be trained up the roof, they do not take up great deal of space. Half a dozen plants will give a quantity of fruit and it will be ripe, red, juicy and tasteful, not the paper-wrapped tasteless pink sponges one generally buys as Tomatoes, out of season. Pot the seedling plants, and shift alone until in fours. Then they may be planted in a bench, or shifted to twelve inch pots, in which, with an occasional feeding of bone-meal and tankard, they will grow perfectly. Train a single stem, and prune much more severely than out of doors. A variety of Tomato will grow remarkably under glass, but for superior quality I prefer Chalk's Early Jewel Comet, or Whole-Salad, the two latter being small-fruited, but of perfect shape and color, making a really beautiful display on the vines as they ripen in clusters.

IN THE PILGRIM MANNER

the shore, with just a bit of a garden, whose Hollyhocks and Larkspurs, sundial, beehives and herbs seem almost a part of the house itself, there is just space enough between the house and the shore so that the lawn is in pleasant proportion to its length and breadth. The house is set low with a rise of land behind, which adds greatly to the intimacy and old-time feeling of its setting. And this setting is not accidental but necessitated the removal of one road and the building of another and much longer one: not only to give plenty of space to the immediate grounds but that this new roadway might wind about the property in a picturesque way in the manner of the old roads.

In everything Mrs. Bratenahl did, she tried to visualize the conditions of those early days and the actual environment in which the early settlers found themselves, so she has left the native planting just as the early settlers left it, increasing rather than lessening what was already there. This native plant material consists chiefly of Blueberries and wild Roses, Bayberries and Clethra, Arrow-wood, Elderberry and Black Alders, Steeplebush and Meadowsweet, Joe Pye Weed, Asters and Goldenrod, Willow and Sumach. In addition to the thousand old high-bush Blueberries were brought over from the Annquam pastures, not so much for the fruit but because their angular and crotchety stems seemed just in character with the house. In the same way the Lilacs beside the front doorway were collected from deserted farmhouses for their wind-swept and straggly old selves. On the grassy slope, an Apple orchard has been planted, and certain Elms and a wild sweep have been placed where they will break the long roof lines in a characteristic way. For the wall stones were carted from West Gloucester farms, relaid in the old way so that the entire place might be closed with something of the old spirit. Many of the stones have moss still upon them, and in the new location are already softer with Woodbine and Honeysuckle while Wild Roses, Goldenrod and Asters are springing up outside by the dusty roadway.

Fir cones are formed, ripened and disintegrated in a single season. At maturity their scales open and hundreds of tiny winged seeds escape and eddy to the ground

CURIOUS FRUIT

woods, the process is completed in a few days, or a couple of weeks at most. In others, like most of our cultivated fruits, it is a matter of from one to four months. The Witch-Hazel is a sluggard and takes a full year. The fruit of the White Oaks ripens in one season; those of the Black and Red Oaks take two seasons to mature. The Firs, Spruces, Hemlocks and Arborvitae mature their fruits in one season. Juniper fruits take two and in some cases three seasons to reach maturity; most of the Pines occupy two years in the task but the remarkable Coulter's Pine takes three years. The Coconut ripens in one year, but the greatest sluggard of all is the extraordinary Double Coconut which is ten years in maturing its fruit.

Size of fruit has nothing to do with the length of time necessary for its development and ripening. The largest fruits produced by any plants are those of the Melon family. Melons of sorts often exceed 100 pounds in weight and Gourds six feet long grow and ripen in a few weeks. These are rapid-growing vines, but there is no strict correlation between the rate of growth of the parent plant and the fruit it produces. As an illustration, in Western Australia grows a remarkable Cycas-like plant known as Macrozamia fraseri, an ancient type of exceedingly slow growth. It has a short massive trunk crowned by tiers of dark green fern-like leaves each from five to six feet long. Each succeeding year a new tier is put forth, but so slowly does the stem increase in height that a plant with a stem five feet tall may be five hundred or more years old. The fruit is a cone-like body more or less egg-shaped and often two feet long, weighing sixty pounds and more, and is developed and ripened within eight months!

Many fruits when ripe advertise the fact by assuming bright colors; others split open and discharge the seed unceremoniously. There are some that make quite a noise and fuss about the matter. The Broom and Gorse, Witch-Hazel and Fothergilla, Prickly Ash, Jewel-weed and others on fine o with much popping and cracking plode their fruits and catapult seeds considerable distances.

As a rule when the fruit is ripe contained seeds are perfected and on soon after reaching the ground germinate and give rise to new plants. in everything else there are exceptions. The seed or germ of the Ginkgo is perfected after the yellow plum-fruit with an abominable odor fallen to the ground. In other the seeds germinate within the fruit as anyone who eats a Grapefruit July can quickly discover. In Bunya Pine, the seeds often push a primitive root while the cone is attached to the tree. But the most incontinent of fruits are those of Mangroves, denizens of the mud shores and littoral swamps of the tropics. While the fruit is attached the parent plant a root is thrust forth which quickly attains a length of from eight to fifteen inches and a thickness of from a quarter to two inches, and finally having exhausted all nourishment the fruit, the embryo breaks away. The root falls perpendicularly into the mud below and from the sunken end two green foliage leaves quickly fold and a new Mangrove tree arises.

If we look upon Nature as the benign mother of a large family terminated upon its perpetuation, to which end she has evolved an infinite number of devices, we gain an insight into the work she does for the family's welfare. It is only when we consider the use and purpose of fruit that any tangible explanation of the multifarious variety in shape and structure is forthcoming, and at times must we remember the struggle for existence, the intense competition that is ever present. We have then Nature a benign mother, but she knows no sentiment and her brook no infringement that does not entail a corresponding penalty, which penalty is usually death. She is benevolent but she is also terrible in the fixity of her determination that the fittest shall survive.

This one device both waxes and polishes floors—with paste or liquid wax

How to have beautiful floors easily and inexpensively

WAX is used in wealthy homes because it is the most beautiful floor finish that money can buy. Wax is used in modest homes not alone for beauty, but also because it saves money and saves work. And when Old English Wax is used, the result is the loveliest floors imaginable with the least work and expense.

Laying foundations for floor beauty. Treat your floors occasionally with Old English Paste Wax. It gives floors a rich, glowing, mellow beauty. It is easily applied. It lasts when it is applied. It is economical because it goes farther and lasts longer. It resists scratches and heel-marks. It costs but a third of other finishes.

Keeping floors clean and bright. Old English Liquid Wax is the easiest, best means of keeping up the floor beauty lent by Old English Paste Wax. Old English Liquid Wax renews and revives floor beauty. It removes all surface dirt, and it doesn't remove the wax. It adds a film of wax to the protective surface. It builds up the surface, makes it more wear-resistant, makes it more beautiful. Put it on wood floors—waxed, varnished or shellaced. Put it on linoleum. It protects all.

The easy way to wax. Apply either Old English Paste Wax or Old English Liquid Wax with the Old English Waxer-Polisher. Here is a single-unit device that applies both, that polishes both. It obviates bending, kneeling—all hard work. No other device can apply and polish both paste and liquid wax. It is the most popular labor-saving device of hundreds of thousands of women. ## CURIOUS FRUIT survive. In this unalterable purpose the individual counts as nothing; it is the type, the race, whose perpetuation is all important. Moreover, the type itself is changeable, not fixed, for adaptability is the keynote to progress.

Of the infinite variety among fruits it is possible here to tell little. The subject is enormous and we are content to instance a few of the more unusual and conspicuous forms. A most familiar type of fruit is that generally understood by the term "berries". The layman naturally uses the term loosely and any juicy, colored fruit to him is a "berry." The botanist disagrees severely with such a definition. Both agree that Gooseberries, Currants and Grapes are berries, but the botanist smiles when the layman points to Strawberries and Raspberries, whilst the layman laughs loudly when the botanist declares that Cucumbers, Melons and Squashes are merely berries. The layman accepts the botanist's opinion that the Peach and Plum are drupes, not berries, but is scornful when told that the Walnut is also a drupe and that the Blackberry is a collection of small drupes aggregated together. Of the same nature as these clustered drupes are the fruits of the Screw Pines of which the variegated Pandanus Veitchii of our greenhouses is a type. These fruits are of huge size, being often larger than a man's head, and a rich reddish orange color. Clustered or hanging from small, often gaunt, branching trees, these fruits are one of the arresting features of the tropical coasts of the Old World.

Accepting the botanist's definition, the largest fruits of the vegetable world are berries. The Melon family produces them and the fruits themselves are familiar objects in America as in other parts of the world. From the Watermelon to the Crook-neck Squash and Turk's Cap Gourd there is immense range in form and appearance, and there are Gourds like flasks and others enormous sausage-like affairs six feet long. All are exceedingly ornamental in appearance, and not least is the remarkable Wax Gourd (Benincasa cerifera) encased in a frost-like covering of snowy whiteness.

THE CONE TYPE

A common type of fruit is the cone, characteristic of the vast family of mostly evergreen trees known as Conifers. The name is from the conical shape of the fruit which is more or less constant throughout the group. The fruit consists of few or many scales arranged around a central axis with the seeds nestling neatly at the base. When ripe and conditions are propitious the cone opens and liberates the seeds. In the Firs, Cedars of Lebanon, the Araucarias and a few others the cone when ripe falls to pieces; in others the cone persists for months or years after the seeds have been liberated, as may be seen when examining any Pine tree. In eastern Australia grows the Bunya Pine (Araucaria Bidwillii) with a cone as large as a man's head and containing many large, edible, nut-like seeds. These cones are very heavy and when ripe are easily detached by the winds and crash to the ground. The noise attracts both kangaroos and the black aborigines and results in a race for the nuts, a prize much valued by both the contestants.

The largest Pine cones are those of the Sugar Pine (Pinus Lambertiana) and Coulter's Pine (P. Coulteri) both native of western North America. The first is a smooth cylindrical affair often twenty inches long; the other is a spiky ovoid mass, heavy and malevolent in appearance. The smallest Pine cone is that of the Scrub Pine (P. contorta) which is never more than two inches long and usually scarcely more than one inch. The smallest of all cones are those of the Chamaecyparis which are no larger than good-sized culinary Peas, yet trees themselves rank among the loftiest of all. This brings to mind another interesting fact. The tallest, most gigantic trees of the world are the Mammoth and Redwood trees of western North America, the Taiwania Formosa and the Eucalyptus of Australia, all of which have small fruits and seeds of microscopic proportions, hundreds of which could be contained in an ordinary thimble.

SILVER-TREE FRUITS

The cone-like fruits of a W. Australia Macrozamia have been mentioned, and that of the Silver-tree of South Africa must not be omitted. This remarkable fruit may be likened to a short, broad egg-shaped Spruce cone but it is erect on the branches. It has stiff scales and at the base each nestles a hard somewhat compressed nut encased in a membranous sheath with four hairy lobes crowned by a slender style with a button-like stigma. When the cone is ripe and the weather dry the scales open and in doing so exert pressure on the base of the nut, forcing it upward and outward; the sheath splits and the four hairy lobes spread themselves and form a perfect parachute; the nut, held below like an enterprising balloon gymnast. The whole structure and mechanism are perfectly adapted for the purpose of seed-dispersal, yet the tree itself is on the verge of extinction, being an old and antiquated type of vegetation. The family to which it belongs is richly represented by primitive forms in the southern hemisphere and especially in Australia. Some of them have very remarkable fruits—none more so than Banksia. This is a handsome genus of small trees with beautifully figured wood, strange foliage and handsome flowers in many elongated cylindrical masses. The cone-like fruits are of weird appearance and are often clad with a mass of shaggy bristles, through which protrude few or many flattened stone-like capsules which open and eject the seeds.

Another large group is classed as capsules, and these fruits, which vary enormously in size and appearance, agree when ripe in being dry and opening to liberate the seeds. Familiar examples are found in the Poppy

America's Great Wood Jury Says— For Exterior Doors and Entrances, California Pine—

ESPECIALLY does the sash and door manufacturer, one of the members of America's Great Wood Jury, recommend California Pine for exterior door, door frames, columns, etc. He has this to say:

"Entrance to the home serves a double purpose—to provide permanent protection against sun and storm, and to contribute those elements of beauty and symmetry so necessary in creating the house charming.

"I know of no other wood so admirably fitted for this task as California Pine. Freedom weather-resisting wood withstands exposure to the elements.

"California Pine has the qualities of the old Eastern Pine. It is light in weight. It takes and holds paint exceptionally well because of its freedom from pitch and "grain-raising." Its soft texture and even grain makes for accurate joinery and for easy-cutting and freedom from splitting and splintering. Carpenters prefer to work with this wood because the ease of cutting and fitting locks and butts effects great savings in cost of installation.

"My advice to home owners, after many years of experience and observation, is to see that California Pine is the wood used for doors and entrance members. In fact, I would recommend the use of this wood throughout the home."

You are safe in following the advice of America's Great Wood Jury.

"DOOR" QUALITIES, and others of like value, make California Pine the favored wood for practically every homebuilding purpose, such as:

Window frames and sash, exterior siding and trim, interior woodwork, mantels, cabinets, bookcases, built-in conveniences, etc., structural framing, sheathing, sub-flooring, porches, trellis, gateways, etc.

CURIOUS FRUIT

Monkshood, Larkspur, Pink, Columbine and Primrose. The Eucalyptus all have capsular fruit which opens by pores or valves. The fruits are often turbinate in shape, and in some urn-shaped, but of relatively small size. In a few species they are crowded together and in one of these (E. Lehmannii) such agglomerated fruits are quite startling in appearance. Perhaps the most remarkable of all capsules is that of the Wooden Pear (Xylomelum pyriformis), a four-inch-high, enormously thickened and hard pear-shape fruit which opens from the top down to liberate a couple of winged seeds.

The pod or legume is the characteristic fruit of a very large family which includes the Peas, Beans, Wattles, Clovers and thousands of others. These pods vary greatly in size, among the largest being those of the Sea-Bean (Entada scandens) which are often more than four feet long. Very curious are the thick, bluish purple pods of Akebia quinata, a hardy Japanese vine.

Among comestible fruits there is great variety. From a structural point of view one of the most interesting is the Pineapple. This fruit is crowned by a tuft of leaves and contains no seeds; it consists of a mass of flowers crowded around the stem, the sepals and petals of which become fleshy and edible. The Pineapple is an American plant cultivated from early time in the tropics and sub-tropics of the world, and its seedless character is considered to be due to its long domestication. The Pineapple may be styled a collective fruit, other examples of which are the Mullberry, Jack-fruit and the famed Breadfruit of the Pacific Islands. Another peculiar fruit is that of the Sacred Lotus Lily (Nelumbium speciosum) which is a top-shaped affair, the upper surface being like a honey-comb with hard nut-like seeds in lieu of honey. When the fruit is ripe and dry these seeds rattle in their loose sockets like teeth in the jawbone of a skull.

Among the fruits classed as nuts there is great diversity of form. Acorns are really nuts, and in Spain are a valuable article of food. The acorns of our native Oak trees are small or relatively so, but in south China there are species like Quercus Carolinae with acorns 1 1/4 inches in diameter. The cup of the acorn varies much in size and form, being shallow or deep, smooth, warty or even bristly; in some Oaks the acorn is almost completely hidden within the cup. A further development is seen in the Chestnut where the nuts are completely enveloped in an extremely prickly cup. A modification is seen in the Hornbeam where a ribbed nut nestles at the base of a 3-lobed open scale, several of which are arranged to form a spiral at the end of the branchlet.

The most useful of all nuts is the Coconut, the fruit of a Palm-tree (Cocos nucifera) common on the shores of all tropical countries. The nut is encased in a thick fibrous covering which is glazed without and impervious to water. The fibrous casing gives buoyancy to the fruit which will drift in ocean currents for thousands of miles and when ultimately cast on land germinates as readily as if fresh fallen from the tree. Authorities are pretty well agreed that this most useful Palm is really a native of the American tropics and that it has reached the Old World through the agency of ocean currents.

The most extraordinary of all nuts is that of the Double Coconut (Lodoicea sechellarum), a Palm peculiar to the Seychelles Islands in the Indian Ocean. Prior to its discovery on these remote islands, the nuts, termed Coco-de-mer, in their fibrous glazed jackets were found floating in the Indian Ocean and were thought to be the product of some fabulous tree which grew in the depths of the ocean. The nut is 2-lobed and of enormous size. Formerly it was viewed with awe and wonderment and regarded as a universal antidote. Such fruits were rare and valuable finds for early voyagers and sold for much money, especially to the churches in South America. The trade flourished until the tree was discovered on its island home, when over-zealous and much too enterprising captain loaded his ship with the fruits and sailed away to South American shores. He overdid the business, the rarity vanished and the bottom fell out of the market for the erstwhile fabulous Coco-de-mer. What formerly it was worshipped, the Double Coconut is now only an object of mild curiosity.

Know these facts about Appalachian Oak Flooring

FLOORING manufactured from Oak grown in the Appalachian Highlands is always to be preferred because of its finer grain, more even texture and uniform color, qualities which are essential for floor beauty and refinement.

These qualities are all inherent in the raw material and depend upon slow and uniform growth of the Oak timber. The ideal conditions for this growth are found in the well drained soil and temperate climate of the Appalachian Highland region. No flooring manufacturer who uses Oak grown under less favorable conditions can attain this beauty of grain, texture and coloring for his product, regardless of the care he takes in manufacturing and grading.

Home builders and architects who know these facts annually specify millions of feet of Ritter Appalachian Oak Flooring. Each piece of our Flooring is branded with our name so that those less familiar with the characteristics of wood can also be certain of obtaining Oak Floors that are a continuous source of satisfaction.

The beauty of floors laid with Ritter Appalachian Oak repays the home owner many times over for the slightly higher initial cost.

NOTE FOR ARCHITECTS:—

Remember no consideration is given to grain, texture and color in the Standard Rules for Grading Oak Flooring. Therefore to be certain of beautiful, durable Oak Floors, specify Ritter Appalachian Oak Flooring.

"Amphill" (1732) near Richmond, Va. Another example of the characteristic plantation scheme, of main house and outlying symmetrically placed buildings. A lofty Georgian room is found in the wing shown here

OLD BALL ROOMS OF THE SOUTH

established across the Potomac.

This room from Gadsby's was but one of quite a number of public rooms which then existed in the country for the purpose of large social gatherings, particularly for routs and assemblies. These public Assembly Rooms were not the only ball rooms then to be found, however, for in a number of instances the private ball room was indulged in. In the old plantation mansion, the stately figure dances of the time generally took place in the large central hall, which far from being but a passage only, was generally a spacious lofty apartment sparsely furnished along the walls, with the floor space kept well clear. Here the hard pine floor shimmering with constant waxing offered space and good going under foot.

In a number of cases, as an added elegance, more definite provision for dancing was desired in order to have greater space and to avoid interference with card playing and punch devoted elders. So a separate ball room was built.

The southern house plan very commonly consisted of the main building flanked on either side by symmetrically located dependent buildings, the latter sometimes connected to the main house by an arcade or a low range of building, but quite commonly with no connection whatever. The usual arrangement was to locate the kitchen in one of these dependent buildings and in the corresponding one on the opposite side was to be found in local parlance "the office". The office was the sanctum of the planter and here he and the other men of the household transacted their business and lounged with their men visitors. In a few instances however the dependent wing balancing the kitchen was developed as a ball room.

Two particularly interesting examples have come recently to the writer's notice. A long anticipated trip to "Amphill", the old Cary place on the James, a few miles down the river from Richmond, revealed what appears to be a fine and early example of this arrangement. This substantial old mansion, built in 1732, is flanked by two out-buildings, in one a great kitchen, and in the other, a high and completely panelled room, possibly used as an "office" but appearing far more like a ball room. Owing to being located in a one-story building, the height is not limited by the second floor, so the room is and extremely dignified. This room now serves for the storage of household goods, but one can conjure up its normal earlier use, and picture the coming of the guests by coach, horseback, particularly by water, in boats manned by liveried oars boys, from the plantations up and down the James. The dancing of those days was just a few hours from midnight dawn. Morning and evening serenade as well as night time. The "the dance" was a commonplace, though Frenched up in name as it is today. The dance often consisted of a light stepping house party of considerable duration and forced day time guests to the plantations. The Christmas celebration particularly took on this plexion of prolonged festivity.

These southern districts abound in Holly, Cedar and Ground Pine to a lesser degree in Mistletoe. Christmas greens were right at hand and plentiful for the trimming up. One can picture the rich greenery against the highly waxed surface of dark pine walls, with twin candles to sparkle up the high of costumes, background, and musicians.

Another old private ball room at "Soldiers Joy," a Cabel plantation in Nelson County, in the vicinity of Charlottesville where Jefferson lived, "Soldiers Joy" was built some years later than "Amphill" and its ball room here while lacking the Georgian richness of the older mansion has the delicate gayety and elegance of the late 18th Century woodwork. The pitch is much higher than the rooms of the main house, and one end is entirely done in wood, with a rich overmantel treatment and delicately carved panel moulds. "Soldiers Joy" is an extensive old clapboard mansion and with its long front caused by its outlying wings, presents a dignified appearance. It is awaiting the wrecker for the removal of its woodwork, unless good fortune comes its way and it is refurbished and lived in again.

Minton English Bone China

LUXOR PATTERN-B1005
PATENTED IN U.S.

The World's Most Beautiful China

Like all Minton designs, the Luxor Pattern is distinguished by the extraordinary skill in decorative art for which this old English house has been famous for many generations.

Combined with a fine sense of harmony, the beautiful colors—soft blue and ivory with coral illumination in the border—are permanent because obtained by individual hand painting which excels any mechanical process. Minton China, while delicately aristocratic in appearance, possesses great durability because of its chief component, calcined ox-bone. This also gives it an incomparable body tone.

Your dealer will be glad to show you this moderately priced Luxor Pattern and other Minton designs.

Beautiful dining-room with low walnut panels and carved walnut furniture. Woodwork by American Sash & Door Co., Kansas City.

The decorative charm of American Walnut

WALNUT has been the preferred wood for carving since the Italian Renaissance masters designed the exquisitely wrought that are today the models for our finest furniture.

It is easy to carve and even the most intricately sculptured embellishments have stood the wear and tear of ages without their beauty.

From the furniture is richly carved while the decorative, are of charming figured panels.

Its rare beauty, dignity and permanence in any form that it is used. Its leadership, established hundred years ago, is recognized the world over.

It covers the entire gamut, from the most expensive to the cheap, and true walnut always gives satisfaction, for its beauty it adds proven durability, resistance to climatic changes and economy of upkeep and great strength. Its color is because nature grew it in the fibres of the wood. The great destroyer, seems only to soften and mellow with age of this lovely wood.

IMPORTANT!

When you buy walnut furniture that at least all the exterior is walnut, if you would have the permanent satisfaction it gives. Much furniture is made with splendid walnut with solid framework and legs of an inferior wood, and should neither be sold or bought as genuine walnut.

Send for our book, "The Story of American Walnut." It is a beautifully illustrated authoritative work on this finest of cabinet woods. It contains all you want to know about it, its history, uses, advantages, superiorities. One chapter you'll value tells how to distinguish real walnut from imitations.

A Happy Gift Idea

THE Stormoguide is a novel gift with much more than its novelty to commend it. What could be more useful than this sure, reliable weather forecaster? So much—business, sport, the success of parties, the fate of new clothes, not to speak of health—depends on knowing, twelve to twenty-four hours in advance, what the weather is going to be.

Ordinary barometers need a scientist to explain them; the Stormoguide has a simple chart which makes its forecast intelligible at a glance. And it has the same absolute precision that has put Tycos instruments in every important laboratory and observatory in the country.

The silvered metal dial, with neat black-filled figures and lettering, together with the tasteful frame of mahogany, rosewood or walnut, makes the Stormoguide a decoration for any room or hall. A simple adjustment—only to be made once—corrects the readings to the altitude of all localities.

An acceptable gift for your friends' homes—an invaluable equipment for your own.

OLD IRON

—a new McKinney finish, echoing the dull, mellow
richness of aging metal

THE FASCINATING PLAY of subdued blue-black lights on old armor; the burnished age-old glint flashing from the blade of a Damascus sword; the baffling depth of light and shade on gleaming hand-wrought metal—your memory turns to these at first sight of this new and exclusive "Old Iron" finish.

With Old Iron, Dull Rubbed Bronze, Satin Silver and more than forty other exclusive finishes, McKinney has, without increasing cost, lifted the hinge from the class of hardware to an artistic ornament taking important place in the decorative scheme of every tastefully finished home.

At once the pleasing results of an early and careful choice of the proper McKinney style and finish become apparent. If your wood trim is to be of Flemish, Weathered or Mission Oak, Old Iron finish provides a final touch of harmony. For White Enamel, Satin Silver or Dull Nickel suggest themselves—and so on, for all possible decorative plans. The professional skill of your architect or builder will prove helpful in selection.

Make your decision carefully. Practically all merchants carrying Builders' Hardware have McKinney Hinges, and will be glad to aid in your choice.

A Gift for Those About to Build

McKinney Forethought Plans consist of little cutouts of your furniture made in proportion to your plans. With them you can arrange and rearrange your furniture right on the blue prints until you are certain the wall space, fixtures, doors and base plugs are as you want them. A mirror, trellis and marbled plant boxes helped to transform the so-called bow window recess into a really inviting little nook. To complete it, a tiled floor and radiator screens were installed.

THE BOW WINDOW PROBLEM

THE traveler in England, if he has an eye for architectural beauty, cannot but be delighted with the semi-hexagonal little oriel windows that cling like swallows' nests high on the walls of some of the old houses. In them, and in the bow windows which, with a sturdy charm of their own, sit so snugly on the ground with a peculiarly British air of comfort, he finds a satisfaction too seldom experienced when viewing a house in America. Our own oriels and bows, often lacking in that subtle invitation to withdraw from a crowded room which should be theirs by rights are many times a problem whose solution by the interior decorator is as puzzling as that presented to one whose chief interest lies in the exterior impression.

Once I came upon such a problem, while doing over a house built some fifty years ago. The window in this particular instance, being a hybrid affair, neither bow nor oriel, went shooting off at an abrupt angle from the drawing room, forming a small rectangle of its own. It was lacking in any charm of proportion and was made further unendurable by having two radiators at one end, and being finished in golden oak!

Calling to mind that delightful book of Miss Elsie de Wolfe's, "The House in Good Taste" published some time ago, but still a vade mecum to seekers after beauty, we remembered a vine-clad and painted Miss de Wolfe had contrived a little bow window in her Irving Place, so we produced the result in the photograph. The two radiators were hidden behind wooden benches, trellis, lovely grey-blue green, finished cream walls, and glass with the trellis set around in slight perspective was installed the blank wall to give a pleasant illusion of leading to fugue beyond and to reflect the effect of the flowers on the trellis thus doubling their decorative value. Marbled plant boxes and tiled floor completed the effect.

From a practical point of view, the treatment of this window has proved a success. The welfare of the plant has been carefully considered by placing asbestos on the top of the radiators, and the benches are fitted with heavy tin trays painted green, which are generously filled with gray pebbles, always kept moist.

As Alice said in the "Looking Glass," "Kindness and putting her hands in curl papers will work wonders for her," so we think that paint and trellis has transformed a hopeless excrescence, called by courtesy a bow window, into something really quite nice.

All the world loves a Beautiful Entrance

One of the most charming things American architecture has produced is the modern Colonial entrance.

No other country or period has created a type that excels its artistic proportion and distinctive beauty. It adds the delightful flavor of Colonial days to many of America's finest homes.

There was a time when designing and building Colonial entrances was a haphazard, makeshift job. Today, however, it is an art, a specialized craft, which makes all the difference in the world in both the entrance itself and the appearance of the building.

Hartmann-Sanders have naturally taken a leading part in this modern development. Their 26 years' experience as America's premier builders of fine wood columns has provided not only the facilities and experience, but also the expert craftsmanship which this fine work demands. For distinctive designs, perfection of detail, and adherence to highest architectural standards, their entrances are not surpassed.

Hartmann-Sanders entrances are designed to your own, your architect's, your contractor's or our specifications. Built complete, ready to erect. Koll Lock-Joint Columns add beauty and guarantee that the joints will not come apart.

Write for new Catalog No. N-51 containing many entrance suggestions. Or for Catalog No. N-34 featuring pergolas, rose arbors, lattice fences, lawn umbrellas, sundials, artificial stone bird baths, fountains, flower vases, etc. Address Hartmann-Sanders Co., 2165 Elston Ave., Chicago, Ill. Test,

Make it yourself: Put a Hoffman Vacuum Valve on one radiator or equip all of them. Hours after you have banked your fires you will find that the radiators you are testing are still hot. In the morning they will be the first to heat. That is because air has been kept out. That is the magic of a vacuum.

BE SURE to ask for Hoffman No. 2 Siphon Air and Vacuum Valves. Your local plumbing and heating shops sell them.

HOFFMAN Vacuum Valves are on the job every minute. You will enjoy them especially at those times when most radiators become cold. Air sneaks in through ordinary valves the instant steam pressure lets down. Hoffman Vacuum Valves keep heat in because they keep air out.

The marked saving you make in fuel is another big advantage. A great many users have told us that 2 tons of coal now give them more heat than 3 formerly did. This is because they don't waste steam pushing out air.

Send us the coupon below for a little book "Locking the Door Against the Heat Thief" which explains in simple words just why the magic vacuum created by Hoffman Vacuum Valves transforms the operation of steam heat. We will also send you a "Thirty-Day Trial Certificate" which lets you test these valves at our risk.

In past your loose windows rushes the cold outside air . . . out goes your money-made heat . . . up goes your fuel cost!

Loose windows on your home mean a cordial invitation for dust, dirt and soot to enter. Loose windows are the cause of cold floors and unevenly heated rooms . . . of dangerous draughts . . . of soiled rugs, drapes and furniture.

With Monarch Interlocking Metal Weather Strips on your windows, their shaky, rattling days are done. It is the interlocking, self-adjusting principle of Monarch Strips which is the secret of their great success.

This interlocking and self-adjusting principle is an exclusive Monarch feature, fully protected by patents. No other weather strip manufacturer can use it. The architectural tradition of its locality is excellently maintained by this community house at Long Meadows, Massachusetts, designed by Smith & Bassette, architects

CLUB HOUSES for COMMUNITIES

the Community House filling station, and from the renting out of certain spaces to the town, and to the Government for the post office.

The large hall of this Community House is in constant demand—for meetings, dances and entertainments, for Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts and for basketball. Movies are shown in it twice a month. There is a library with 2000 books, a canteen with two canteen workers in charge, a large number of shower baths, tennis courts, playgrounds, and a free kindergarten. The whole thing is the property of the town and the people, and the pleasure they get from it is only equalled by the pride they take in it.

As an example of whole-hearted response to a public spirited effort it is of almost dramatic importance.

The enterprise is certainly one that must encourage other similar communities to provide themselves with such a splendid necessity. Merely the expedient of combining with the Community House building the various public offices and spaces of the town should help materially to solve some of the practical problems, and the fact that considerable revenue can be derived from the different activities of the House should solve some more. In the case of the Community House in Westport, for example, the architect contrived to include at one end of the structure an efficient as well as good appearing fire-house to supplant the not overpleasing building which formerly housed the apparatus. It might not always be necessary to put up a new building, for a suitable structure is often available; in fact, this possibility might lead to something very pleasant if there were an old meeting house or residence whose associations, either historical or architectural, were of some local significance, which could be taken over and remodeled for the purpose. The undertaking, under any circumstances, however, is one which should be given very careful consideration. A community house, to be successful, must offer attractions that will give it popularity. It should fit the mood of the neighborhood. If it does these things it will become the center of community life, and if it does these things extremely well the whole community will show the effects in no uncertain way.

The Matincock Neighborhood House, near the Piping Rock Club, Locust Valley, L. I., was designed in the Dutch Colonial manner by Guy Lowell, architect

THREE FINE MAGNOLIAS

THAT there are Magnolias which bloom in June and July may come as a surprise to those who ordinarily think of these flowers as among our earliest spring bloomers. Yet it may safely be said that the most unusual and effective species of this shrub are among the late ones.

Magnolia tripetala, commonly called the Umbrella Tree, is the first to bloom of the three varieties considered here. It appears normally from Pennsylvania to Mississippi, but also thrives in the more severe climate of New England. It attains a height of 25 feet and is of a typical pyramidal growth. The thin, flexible limbs seem to be terminated by a rosette of five to seven leaves in the center of which rests a snow-white flower with elongate, pointed petals and a thick yellow pistil. Close examination reveals a growing tip making its way through the leafy crown as if to take advantage of the beauty above it. The leaves are dark green above and silvery beneath, and are about 16 to 20 inches long by 8 inches broad. The flower is 6 or 8 inches in diameter and has an odor which is not unpleasant.

A light breeze causes this graceful tree to assume an almost fairylike appearance. Slender branches tipped by the horizontal leaf clusters carrying their white crowns present an ever-changing spectacle as they tilt and sway in the gentle winds of early summer.

More stately and even more elegant than the preceding is Magnolia macrophylla, which thrives in all latitudes from the northern States to southern Florida. Its growth is more vigorous, the height varying from 30 to 50 feet. The leaves are about 25 inches long and 10 inches broad, and the flowers from 10 to 12 inches in diameter. One of these trees bedecked with its numerous candle-like flowers reminds one of a Eucalyptus in Australia perched with wild cockatoos.

The best location for Magnolia tripetala and M. macrophylla is a moist soil where there is high and light shade, such as is produced by Elms and Ashes. The protection from the wind which such trees afford is also desirable. The Magnolias may be readily grown from seeds, for their growth is rapid and they bloom at an early age.

Between M. tripetala, which is in full bloom in the early days of June, and M. macrophylla, reaching its glory in July, stands M. Watsoni. Its growth is different, resembling that of the earlier varieties such as M. soulangeana, the queen of the spring. The outstanding features of this Magnolia lie in its flower buds, round in form and of an unusual color combination produced by the stamens which are in general crimson, and the whole enclosed by a snow-white corolla—a wonderful display! In addition to the striking coloring there is to be found a very rare odor which is perceptible

The blossoms of M. tripetala are borne on terminal foliage rosettes. They are snow-white with yellow pistils and open in early June

When fully expanded, M. macrophylla's flowers sometimes measure a foot in diameter. The leaves also are strikingly long and broad

M. macrophylla does best in a moist soil where there is high and light shade cast by larger trees. It sometimes reaches fifty feet where conditions are favorable at a distance of fifty feet in the moist hours of the evening and night. It partakes of the odor of a ripe quince and that of the pineapple—exceedingly exotic, and for a northerner who is accustomed to the milder fragrances it may be a little pungent.

THREE FINE MAGNOLIAS

It would mark a considerable advance in American home grounds planting if these and other particularly worthy Magnolias were more often used by those who have the space and the situations suited to them. From whatever standpoint one may care to consider them they are desirable landscaping subjects, not only because of their intrinsic beauty but also from the fact that they are still, generally speaking, comparative novelties.

CANDLES FOR ALL OCCASIONS

CANDLES have other uses than on Christmas trees, altars, and birthday cakes, and in Japanese lanterns and actresses' bedrooms. They were devised originally to give light and despite all of our high power modern electric illumination they are still very useful for that purpose. Especially since the improvement of the smokeless and non-dripping candles.

Candlelight in summer is very gay but uncertain for the draughts from open windows have a tendency to make the small flames flicker distressingly. But in the long evenings of winter, when the out-of-doors is kept securely on the other side of the window, they give a cordial light that is not equalled by anything save an open fire. And if one is of a serious disposition they need not be too remindful of children's birthdays and lawn parties.

They are most useful for bringing out the color and form of vases and pitchers and other decorative pieces on tables and mantels, and they actually seem to put the sunlight back into paintings or colored prints long after the day is gone. Flowers stand out clearly in their gentle light, the colors deeper and the petals made more individual and distinct with their separate tiny shadows. And in the least expected places the slender, fanciful silhouettes of shadow move very slightly on the wall.

Standing before a mirror their torches throw down pools of light into the rug or across a chair back, as no ordinary plain or frosted incandescent bulb can do. And on the dining table in the innumerable bright facets of polished glass and the placid curved surfaces of silver, the white and yellow flames are reflected in a thousand forms and degrees of soft brilliance.

With all of these so practical uses it would indeed seem a pity to light candles only on special occasions.

ENGLAND'S BEST

FOR THE GARDENER'S SCRAP BOOK

FROM the first of December until the middle of February is the best season for pruning the great majority of fruit and ornamental trees in the middle and northern tiers of States. During these months they are dormant, their sap is for the most part stored in the roots, and even large, green branches can be cut away without loss of the vital liquid which is literally the life-blood of a tree. By the time the sap starts its upward flow in late winter the wounds will have healed sufficiently to prevent any undue loss.

Twigs and small branches up to half-an-inch in diameter may be removed with a heavy knife or stout pair of pruning shears. Above this size, a crosscut saw, with its teeth set "wide" to lessen the difficulty of cutting through green woods, is the best tool.

Every cut made should, of course, be clean and without ragged edges. In cases where entire branches are to be taken off, cut as close as possible to the trunk. If they are at all inclined to be heavy, make a shallow cut upward from the lower side before starting the main cut from above. This will prevent stripping of the bark and splintering of the wood as the weakened branch begins to sag.

Unless it cannot possibly be avoided, no cut of any size should be horizontal. The remaining stub, should it be of such size that rain, ice or snow might collect upon it, should be given enough slant at the cut line to carry off these agents of rot and disease.

As a further precaution against the harmful entry of moisture during the time which it will take the bark to grow over and protect the wound, thick paint should be daubed over every fresh cut whose diameter is half-an-inch or more. Special tree paint can be bought for this purpose, or use made of the ordinary lead-and-oil mixture which is commonly employed for exterior house painting.

TEMPERATURE and moisture are perhaps the two most important factors in the successful wintering over of such things as Gladiolus bulbs, Dahlia tubers and the various vegetable root crops. Too much warmth may induce premature sprouting, a deficiency of atmospheric moisture or too much exposure to the air may bring about disastrous shriveling, while a humid atmosphere is quite sure to entail dangers of decay of one sort or another if it continues for any length of time. Actual freezing, of course, is fatal to much material of these sorts.

For an all-around storage place, a temperature of about 50° is the safest. With it, the air should be neither noticeably dry nor damp—it ought to have just the degree of humidity which is most comfortable to human beings. A certain amount of ventilation is desirable in the storage space, for the same sort of reasons that it is desirable in our own rooms.

NOW that outdoor work is virtually at a standstill, it is a wise gardener who knows (and acts upon) the very real importance of caring for his implements during the off-season. An hour or two of attention devoted now to such tools as spades, iron rakes, wheel-hoes, lawn mowers and such other essential ones as will not be used for the next few months will be well repaid not only by their far longer life but also by the greater ease and effectiveness of using them when warm weather returns.

Sane winter care of garden implements implies, for those of metal, a thorough cleaning followed by a complete coating of heavy oil; and for those of wood, a good painting or oiling wherever these preservatives have worn off. Further than this, they should be stored in a cellar or outbuilding which is free from dampness. Don't let them lie around at random in all sorts of places and deteriorate, for orderliness, though it may not be gardening's first law, comes rather close to the premier position.

Strengthen the "Weakest Spot"

THE deacon said, "It's mighty plain that the weakest spot must stand the strain." The deacon was talking about one hoss shays but we are talking about homes. In most homes, the plaster is the weakest spot—the feature that makes homes prematurely old. But the deacon showed us the remedy which is to "make that spot as strong as the rest."

Bostwick "Truss-Loop" Metal Lath makes plastered surfaces as strong as the rest of the house. It means satisfaction while you own it and highest resale value when you part with it. Send for sample and literature to

FISHER BODIES

FISHER is an organization of specialists.

More than one hundred skilled trades reach their highest development in its service. Within it are found all the varied contrasts of industry.

The sheet-metal worker, at his giant toggle press, stamps out steel panels under thousands of pounds pressure. The skilled silver worker, with his delicate instruments, works out fine fitments for luxurious bodies.

In the forests of the southern and northern states, Fisher lumber-jacks fell selected trees, which mill workers make into lumber for Fisher bodies.

In southern Illinois, where tremendous glaciers in ages past crushed the solid rock to fine, white silica sand, Fisher glass workers, in the most modern glass plants in the world, make the genuine plate glass used in Fisher bodies.

Textileworkers, upholsterers, painters, enamelers—the most skilled craftsmen in these and a multitude of other trades are called to the task of making Fisher bodies finer and better.

The work of all these expert workers is constantly checked by a veritable army of carefully trained inspectors who subject every phase of production in a Fisher body to closest and most critical scrutiny.

It is a fact, that workmen in these more than a hundred trades work to such high standards that they have formed the habit of excellence in their work—a fact which in major degree accounts for the finer attributes of bodies by Fisher.
